Hoover Plan Is Branded Isolationist By Truman

U. S. Not Returning To Such a Course—Public Opposes It, President Declares

President Truman yesterday branded Herbert Hoover's foreign policy speech of last week as nothing but isolationism.

He told reporters at a thinly attended press conference that the country was not going back to isolationism, and said they could be sure of that.

Hoover had called for building a "Gibraltar" of defense in the western hemisphere, and had opposed sending more men or money to western Europe until the Europeans armed themselves on a vastly greater scale.

The speech spread shock and dismay throughout western Europe, but the President appeared unworried by it. Asked whether the White House mail was running for or against Hoover's views, he said it was running for the President of the United States on that subject.

Several Senators had reported their mail overwhelmingly favorable to Hoover's ideas; one, from the Southwest, said the pro-Hoover letters were coming chiefly from former Army officers and from immigrants or descendants of immigrants.

One reporter asked the President yesterday whether he considered the Hoover speech isolationist. Read it carefully, Mr. Truman answered; it is nothing else.

But he declined to make a full-dress reply to the Hoover proposals, although a reporter asked him:

"Mr. President, would you like to comment on the results to this country if you should take Mr. Hoover's advice?"

I would have to make a speech which would take all afternoon, the President answered, and you haven't got the time.

So far the only extended answer to Hoover from any Administration leader has come from Secretary Acheson, in a press conference statement last Friday. And Acheson did not even mention Hoover by name.

From the President's reluctance yesterday, and from the silence of nearly everyone else in a responsible position, it looked as if the Administration were leaving it to internationally-minded Republic-

Dreyer Gets Post On Council of OAS

John C. Dreyer, of the District of Columbia was appointed by President Truman yesterday to represent this country on the Council of the Organization of American States. He will have the personal rank of ambassador.

Dreyer replaces Paul C. Daniels who was recently nominated Ambassador to Ecuador. Daniels had held the post for several years. Dreyer has been alternate United States delegate to the CAS council for over two years.

Dreyer has specialized in general inter-American affairs such as the Organization of American States, the Pan-American Union, Inter-American conferences and broad policy measures affecting the Latin American countries as a whole.

Caucus Query On Seating Faces Butler

Anderson to Cite Transactions With Campaign Printer

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) will ask the Senate Democratic caucus January 2 to consider whether Republican Senator-elect John Marshall Butler of Maryland should be seated January 3.

After announcing this plan, Senator Anderson said last night that the report of a Baltimore printer's business transactions with the Butler campaign organization is one of the things he would like the caucus to consider.

The printer, William H. Fedder, 40, has given a statement to the Senate subcommittee on privileges and elections. Chairman Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) said the story is being investigated.

Letter Key Feature

Its key feature, it was indicated, is a letter from Butler to Fedder guaranteeing to pay the printer's bill. A legal review of the letter is being made to determine whether it could be classed as a campaign contribution in excess of the $5000 limit on the candidate himself, but committee aides indicated they have found no precedents to help them decide.

Anderson's announcement went further than any other development to date in raising the prospect of a Senate contest over the seating of Butler.

Butler, a Baltimore attorney and political unknown, beat the veteran Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) by some 40,000 votes in one of November's biggest election upsets.

Tydings Attitude

Tydings so far has disclaimed any intention to contest the election, while at the same time indicating he would be pleased if the contest would be initiated by the Gillette committee. This move was rejected by the Gillette group: It decided it could not initiate a contest.

Anderson himself made clear

NPA Lists 55 Products In Move to Conserve Scarce Raw Materials

The Government yesterday established itself as the sole importer and distributor of natural rubber.

In another raw materials curb, the National Production Authority listed 55 scarce materials the hoarding of which will be subject to severe penalties.

The National Production Authority and General Services Administration decreed that beginning today, only General Services Administrator Jess Larson may import natural rubber and natural rubber latex. He will allocate the quantities needed to the national stockpile, and resell the remainder to tire makers and other rubber processors.

Since the Government already owns almost all of America's synthetic rubber industry, yester-

Brennan Wants Aide To Find Materials

District Purchasing Officer Roland M. Brennan said yesterday he has asked the Commissioners for a $4200-a-year assistant to work full time on the job of finding scarce materials for city needs.

Brennan said he is having trouble buying metals, particularly steel and copper. In three tries the city found no bidders on a contract to provide steel sheets for garbage trucks, Brennan said. Suppliers have also indicated they can't meet the water division's need for copper fittings and tubing, he added.

Many D. C. Non-Profit Groups Eager to Join Security Plan

(Sixth of a Series)

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A group of nonprofit organizations, eligible for Social Security for the first time, are showing the most active interest in the expanded program.

Educational, charitable, scientific, literary and religious groups now may take part in the plan if two thirds of their employes favor the insurance protection. About 600,000 persons are eligible.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue this week issued a dire ive permitting such nonprofit groups to join Social Security on January 1 even if two-thirds of the employes have not yet actually indicated approval.

The directive declares that such groups "having knowledge or reasonable expectation" that at least two-thirds of their employes will want to join, may obtain go-ahead authority by filing a certificate indicating they will pay their share of the tax, and attaching the signatures of employes available. The remainder of the two-thirds must be filed "as early as possible," but not later than April 30, 1951.

Certificates received on January 2, 1951, or postmarked before midnight December 31, 1950, will be considered by the Bureau of Internal Revenue as "received" by January 1, and the organizations may begin collecting Social Security tax as of that date, the Internal Revenue Bureau announced.

Many colleges which do not already have a retirement program are planning to affiliate. Others are in the process of polling sentiment of employes.

Draft To Hit 19-Year-Olds In Maryland

District, Virginia Will Draw Heavily On Men in 20s; 80,000 Ordered Up

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Army yesterday issued a call for the induction of 80,000 more draftees in March.

As a result, 19-year-olds will have to be called up in Maryland to meet the March draft quota. The District and Virginia must dig deeply into their pool of 20-year-olds to meet their March quotas.

A Baltimore selective service spokesman said yesterday that 21-year-olds already have been called up in Maryland for January induction, and that the 19-year-olds would be reached in March.

District and Virginia draft officials said they could meet January requirements from among the 22-year-olds, and that 19-year-olds probably would not have to be called until April or May.

Makes Total 450,000

The March call of 80,000, which comes on top of similar calls for January and February, raises the Army's requisition of men through selective service to 450,000 since war broke out in Korea last June.

There were two other important manpower developments yesterday:

1. Selective Service ordered a second registration of physicians, dentists and veterinarians under 50. The new registration, set for January 15, will cover some 210,000 medical men not required to show up for the first registration held last October 15.

2. The Second Army ordered 1600 reserve officers to report for duty in March, including 81 from the District, 80 from Maryland, and 47 from Virginia.

Quotas in Three Areas

The March draft call of 80,000 means that the District will have to supply approximately 370 men; Maryland, 1200; Virginia, 1700.

As in previous calls, the Air Force, Navy and Marines passed up the draft, and decided to fill their needs from volunteers. The Army already has inducted 210,000 draftees through December.

Besides the draftees, the Army has called up six National Guard divisions of which four already are in training.

On Tuesday, the Army ordered 7585 reserve lieutenants and captains up for active duty in March. The Second Army, which includes seven States and the District of Columbia, has a quota of 1300 company grade officers of whom 500 already have volunteered for active duty. Those called up will be in camp by March 29, 1951.

In two earlier reserve calls, the Second Army ordered up 3400 company grade officers.

The new registration of the nation's medical men covers Priority III and IV under the doctor-draft act, and includes, generally, medical men who did not serve in the armed forces subsequent to Sept. 16, 1940 (Priority III) and those who did (Priority IV).

Earlier registration of about 21,000 physicians, dentists, and veterinarians covered those men deferred in World War II so that they could complete their education and training and who saw less than 90 days' service in uniform (Priority I) and those who saw less than 21 months' service (Priority II).

Didn't Follow All the Rules

Remington Not 'Orthodox' Communist, Ex-Wife Testifies

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Mrs. Ann Moos Remington testified in Federal Court here today that she and her divorced husband "were not orthodox Communists who followed all the rules" but were "Communists just as much as we wanted to be."

The statement came during a day devoted almost exclusively to cross-examination of the 34-year-old former wife of William W. Remington, former $10,000-a-year Government employe now on trial for perjury. He is charged with lying in declaring that he had never been a Communist Party member.

The day was marked by two other major developments in the case:

1. Mrs. Remington declared that her former husband, "anxious" that she not testify before the grand jury which subsequently indicted him last summer, "suggested that I ask my doctor to prove me mentally incompetent." At the time, she said, both the Remingtons were seeing Washington psychiatrists.

2. Remington's lawyers angrily charged that the Government, since the indictment, had "intimidated" 13 witnesses by examining them before grand juries in New York, Washington, Los Angeles and perhaps elsewhere, and that two others were called before a grand jury only this morning in the same Federal courthouse here on Foley Square where Remington is on trial.

One of these two, the defense charged, became "so frightened" she now has refused to testify though she could have given evidence that Remington was not a member of a Communist unit of which she had knowledge.

All of this District Attorney Irving H. Saypol called a "contemptuous performance" and "shenanigans." He denied that anyone on his staff or in the Federal Bureau of Investigation had intimidated anyone.

Federal Judge Gregory F. Noonan refused a defense plea by Attorneys William C. Chanler and Joseph L. Rauh, jr., to impound grand jury records and to quash the subpenas for the two persons called today. Rauh then gave the judge, in private, the 15 names and declared the defense was "prepared to prove" the alleged attempt to influence witnesses.

Mrs. Remington's declaration that she and her husband were not "orthodox Communists" came toward the end of a long day in which Chanler brought out a rather sporadic and sometimes casual relationship, as she de-

Wife's Favors Given Judge Fail To Free Spouse

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 28 (AP).—A woman who had sexual relations with a judge to keep her husband out of prison has been imprisoned herself—along with the judge, a lawyer and a doctor who were tried with her, the Czechoslovak news agency reported tonight.

The trials were held this week in the Prague district criminal court. All confessed, the agency said.

Mrs. Martha Littmann, wife of a lawyer named Jan Littmann, was sentenced to two and a half years. Zdenek Weber, the former judge, got four years. Lawyer Josef Dolezal drew three years, and Dr. Jaromir Tesar, a year and a half.

The Littmanns were tried before Judge Weber last year on a charge of "uncompleted incitement to abuse official power," which was not further explained. Mrs. Littmann went free then but her husband was sentenced to two years.

The agency said that thereafter Mrs. Littmann "entered into intimate relations" with Weber to try to free her husband, and also tried to bribe him with money. The quartette was tried on charges of misusing or consipiring to misuse judicial authority.

D. C. Drivers Warned

Sleet Storm Arrives in D. C.; Ice Ties Up Virginia Traffic

Sleet and freezing rain began to move in on the Washington area early today in a storm that Weather Bureau officials predicted would extend from Virginia to New Jersey.

They warned that driving conditions were becoming hazardous in many places. Area police warned bus companies to be careful.

The storm centered first in southern Virginia, canceling all bus service in and out of Danville. The last bus to 'crawl in" from Winston-Salem, N. C., arrived in Danville at about 7 p. m. and was stranded for the night. At Roanoke, plane flights out of the airport were canceled until noon today.

In Norfolk, the commandant of the Fifth Coast Guard District issued a warning to mariners that there is ice in the upper Chesapeake Bay and Elk River. Ice buoys were moved in to replace lighted buoys in these areas.

In Richmond, driving was dangerous and streets slippery. Early last night highway crews cindered important thoroughfares. In Lynchburg, traffic was virtually halted by a thin sheet of ice over the streets.

Local officials said the freezing rain was causing more damage than sleet, and predicted both might turn to snow later today. They hope for rising temperatures this afternoon with a high of 34 degrees.

Yesterday the temperature here never got above the freezing point, 32, reached at 4:15 p. m.

For the first time in three years, park police opened the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool to skaters. They said the pool would stay open as long as the weather remains cold or, as a police official put it, "until four or five thousand people get out there and break through the ice." Police are watching carefully for cracks.

A strip along the south side of the pool was first to be opened, at 10 a. m. At the north end the thinner ice was barricaded off. Police said they had no estimate of the number of skaters who used the pool yesterday.

Also open to ice enthusiasts, police said, is the pool at the Kenilworth Aquatic Gardens, Kenilworth ave. and Douglas st. ne.

The thermometer dropped to 20 degrees at 1:40 a. m. yesterday, short of the predicted near-zero low. Weather Bureau officials said the temperature was kept up by cloud banks over the city.

31 Divisions Are Reported Threatening U.N. Lines

MacArthur Expects Enemy To Be Able To Hit by Jan. 1 With 310,000 Men

TOKYO (Friday), Dec. 29 (AP).—The great pressure of massing enemy troops has forced back United Nations forces as much as about 10 miles on the eastern flank in Korea, the Eighth Army said today.

Patrols lanced out along the 150-mile front near the thirty-eighth parallel. Allied warplanes in force blasted away at front line and rear base positions.

An estimated 31 enemy divisions, possibly 310,000 men, were believed ready to open a powerful offensive between January 1 and 10, possibly with support of the seldom-used Chinese Communist air force.

Buildup Seen in East

A briefing officer at Eighth Army Headquarters said Chinese and North Korean forces were building up on the east flank and in the center.

He reported small Chinese elements also were on the move at the west end of the front just south of the thirty-eighth parallel.

These elements were moving eastward from Kaesong to Korangpo. Kaesong is 35 miles northwest of Seoul. Korangpo is 28 miles north.

The full extent of the east flank withdrawal, its exact location, and the size of the withdrawing force were not disclosed.

Red Planes More Active

Signs of an increase in enemy air action became evident. The Far East Air Force said F-80 Shooting Star jets had four encounters Thursday near Korea's northwest border with up to 12 Russian-made MIG-15 jets. The F-80 pilots said they shot down one MIG and damaged two others without loss to themselves.

Three enemy planes were knocked out on the ground.

Task Force 77 planes roared back into action after having covered the sea evacuation of 105,000 U. N. combat forces from Hungnam in northeast Korea.

General MacArthur warned Thursday that up to 190,000 Chinese Communists could hit the U. N. line in force between January 1 and 10. Red patrols and U. N. troops clashed sharply Thursday 28 miles north of Seoul.

MacArthur said the 190,000, forming the six army corps of China's veteran Fourth Field Army, would be given greater striking power if the enemy commits the Chinese Communist air force.

He said that eight to 12 North Korean divisions have been acting as a screen for the impending Chinese blow.

The clash north of the Republican capital was one of several short, sharp patrol fights along the western sector of the 150-mile peninsula-wide Allied front.

Red patrol activity was reported increasing along the mountainous eastern sector of the front.

Unit Identifications Banned

MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters banned identification of Allied ground units in Korea below army level. Only the broad designations of U. S. Eighth Army or United Nations forces may be used until further notice.

The new blackout on unit designations could mean fighting was

Viet Minh Take 2 French Posts In Indo-China

SAIGON, Indo-China, Dec. 28 (AP).—Viet Minh shock troops drove the French from two posts in the Chauson-Moncay defense line below the Chinese frontier today and attacked again in a mountainous salient near Hanoi.

A French military spokesman said the long-awaited big new offensive by the Communist-led Viet Minh rebels may have begun.

Chauson itself was given up by the French, again shrinking by several miles a line they established after they were hammered from most of their frontier fortresses in the fall. Chauson lies about 10 miles northwest of the pivotal position at Tienyen, the base of a "V" whose right arm leads to Moncay, on the Gulf of Tonkin. Casualties were said to have been light.

Between Tienyen and Moncay, waves of Viet Minh troops fell upon the outnumbered French garrison of Binhlieu and forced it out after a hard battle. A French communique said most of the garrison escaped and joined a relief column. The relief column reoccupied Binhlieu briefly and then retired itself. Viet Minh losses were described as heavy.

[French shipping sources in Singapore said all French women and children in Indo-China are to be evacuated soon on the advice of military authorities there. A half dozen ships, including the 10,000-ton luxury liner Le Conte de Lisle, will be used in the movement. A French government spokesman in Paris, however, said "nothing is known here" of such a plan.]

U. S. Not to Let Russia Block Peace With Japan, Note Insists

By Ferdinand Kuhn

The United States made it clear yesterday that it would not let Russia block a peace treaty with Japan.

It also insisted that Japan, like every other country, must have the right to defend itself against "irresponsible militarism," perhaps with the help of American or other foreign troops.

These and other American views were contained in a sharp and sometimes sarcastic memorandum handed to Jacob A. Malik, the chief Soviet delegate to the United Nations.

Last month the Russians demanded a veto power over the Japanese treaty, warned that they

GOP Attacks Stir Backing for Acheson

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Two more Senate Democrats yesterday spoke up in support of the anti-Communist policies of Secretary of State Dean Acheson in a continuing backfire against Republican demands for his resignation.

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), a delegate to the U. N. Assembly, said the "political" nature of the Republican attack is consolidating Democratic support for Acheson and his policies.

"I think, on any showdown, we would present a practically united front for the President's refusal to make him the scapegoat of the Korean crisis," said Sparkman.

'Our Voice and Agent'

Senator Robert S. Kerr (D., Okla.), in a column written for Oklahoma newspapers, termed it vital "to the best interests of all Americans to help our Secretary of State be as strong as possible, instead of as weak as his critics can make him."

"Mr. Acheson is our voice and our agent in forging the vital lines of defense at the council tables of the world," said Kerr.

"His mission to Brussels impressively dramatizes our stake in his strength and his success. While he works for our future, yes, our very survival, I do not think his hands should be tied by public abuse or open repudiation at home."

Silent almost to a man during the heat of the Republican campaign attack on Acheson, more and more Democrats have been speaking out publicly since House and Senate Republican caucuses asked Truman to replace him.

'Who Could Do More?'

Sparkman said the reaction in Acheson's favor is due mainly to a "cold appraisal" of the Secretary's consistant moves against Communist aggression, from formulation of the "Truman Doctrine" in Greece and Turkey to the decision to go into Korea.

"I agree with the President that no one could have done more to oppose communism. Besides, these two questions arise: Who would you name to replace him? What would any successor do that Acheson isn't already doing?"

Both Sparkman and Kerr hit at former President Hoover's proposal to pull back our defense lines to the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Sparkman called it a "dangerous" proposal that would move defense thinking "back 25 years."

Court Allows Hiss to Stay Free on Bond

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (AP).—Alger Hiss was allowed continued freedom on bail today in a two to one decision by the United States Court of Appeals.

The court allowed bond to stand at $10,000 until Hiss' perjury conviction is ruled upon by the United States Supreme Court.

Hiss, former high State Department aide, was convicted in Federal Court early this year of lying when he denied he ever gave State Department secrets to a Soviet spy ring.

He was sentenced to five years in prison. The Appeals Court upheld this conviction recently.

The circuit court, in today's decision, also held up until at least January 6 the imprisonment of Hiss.

Had they not taken this action, he automatically would have had to begin serving his term. However, it is customary to give a defendant a full opportunity to carry out a Supreme Court appeal.

Judges August N. Hand and Thomas W. Swan agreed in allowing Hiss to remain free on bond. Judge Harrie B. Chase was willing to stay Hiss' imprisonment until January 6 but said he did not think bond should be granted.

Iron Curtain Trade of Allies Faces Probe

By The Associated Press

Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) said yesterday a Senate investigating subcommittee which he heads plans a broadscale inquiry into trade between "our supposed allies" and Iron Curtain nations.

O'Conor said his goal is "to stop a common enemy from getting essential materials." He said his subcommittee, reconstituted Wednesday, may resume public hearings in early January.

As a starting point, O'Conor said, he will ask the group to explore reports that "very sizeable shipments of strategic materials have been shipped from Marshall aid countries to certain Iron Curtain countries within the past 30 days—and this five months after the start of the Korean fighting."

His staff, he said, already has accumulated a file of information that the shipments contained materials "that would build the industrial potential of the receiving countries, and some of which conceivably would have immediate military value." He declined to identify any of the countries he said were involved.

The subcommittee claims credit for recent tightening of United States controls on the export of strategic materials to ports in the Soviet orbit.

"Obviously it doesn't make sense for us to tighten up on shipments from the United States to places behind the Iron Curtain, if we countenance the shipment of similar materials to the same areas by our allies under the Marshall Plan," O'Conor said.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer recently told the Senate Appropriations Committee his department has worked for two years to clamp down on such transshipments.

But he conceded that "I do not know" how effective these steps have been, although he insisted "they are getting to be more effective."

Sawyer's testimony, given at a closed-door hearing on the $20,000,000,000 military appropriations bill, was made public by the committee.

U.S. Reported Aiding Arms Plan of Italy

By The Associated Press

The United States is reported to have told the Italian government to "go ahead" immediately with plans for manufacturing about four million dollars worth of arms next year.

The State Department has assured the Italians informally, officials said, that American financial aid—provided in the European rearmament program—will be forthcoming to help put the Italian production plan into effect.

The exact amount of American dollar aid, it was emphasized, will depend on how great a production effort the Italians put forth on their own.

The Italian plans calls for turning out recoiless rifles, mortars, machine guns, transport vehicles, cargo trucks and large quantities of ammunition.

Joseph E. Jacobs, American defense aid chief for Italy, is reported to have submitted the Italian plan to the State and Defense Departments shortly before Christmas.

The American advice to Italy, officials said, was to start work immediately to manufacture supplies needed by the Italian armed forces under the North Atlantic Treaty defense strategy.

Later, Italy can make more detailed plans they said, for using its idle industrial capacity and unemployed labor to turn out military supplies needed by other pact nations.

The Italian armed forces are limited by the World War II peace treaty to 250,000 men, 200 planes and a small fleet for home waters.

ECA to Halve Paris Staff In 6 Months

PARIS, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—More than half of the 571 American employes of the Economic Cooperation Administration in Paris will be laid off in the next six months, an ECA official said today.

The staff cut results from the tapering-off of Marshall Plan aid, the official said, and the growing importance of North Atlantic defense efforts.

He said most if not all of those who were leaving ECA before next July if they wished could find jobs in the western Europe defense organizations or in American Government agencies abroad.

There are about 700 French nationals working in the ECA's French mission and more than 1000 European employes in other countries, the official said. No appreciable cut among French employees is anticipated before the Marshall Plan comes to an end in 1952, he said.

Personnel cuts also are anticipated in the London office of ECA although it is much smaller and has a total American staff of only about 75 persons, an ECA spokesman said.

West Germany May Allocate Raw Materials

FRANKFURT, Dec. 28 (AP).—West Germany, a key scource of supplies for European defense, will be forced to slash production soon because of a critical shortage of raw materials, a high American official said today.

Jean Cattier, ECA chief in West Germany, also said American and German officials are discussing possible curbs on civilian consumption of nonessential goods to meet defense needs.

"The German government will soon be faced with necessity of allocating raw materials," he added. "Demands for raw materials will be greater than the available supply."

The effect of the shortage will be to hold back—temporarily at least—the mobilization of German industry. Allied and German officials are now negotiating on what West Germany can contribute in men and materials to Western defense.

Cattier said in an interview the vast Ruhr faces production cuts during the next three months, due primarily to a coal shortgae.

The Ruhr,—powerhouse of Hitler's Wehrmacht—has been funneling key products to Western nations in increasing amounts ever since the Korean war erupted.

Now, said Cattier, the Ruhr faces extreme difficulties in finding raw materials to support its expanded production, due to greatly increased prices in world markets and a foreign exchange shortage.

Power rationing also will be necessary during the next few weeks at least, he said. This could further cripple industrial output.

The rapid increase in industrial production since July and a summer slump in coal production have spawned a serious coal shortage in the Ruhr, the ECA official said.

He disclosed that a shortage of 1,250,000 tons is expected during the first three months of 1950.

Cattier stressed, however, that West Germany's capacity to turn out industrial equipment is matched in this area only by Britain.

Grand Jury Hears May For 3 Hours

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Kenneth O. May, 35, a mathematics professor, yesterday testified for three hours before the Federal grand jury investigating Joseph W. (Scientist X) Weinberg.

The grand jury resumed its inquiring of Weinberg after an almost five-month lapse. According to Assistant United States Attorney William Hitz, the body is to determine whether Weinberg perjured himself in a House Un-American Activities Committee investigation of possible espionage on the West Coast.

Dr. Weinberg, former physicist at the Berkeley, Calif., radiation laboratory, denied that he knew Steve Nelson, Communist Party organizer, who was accused of being a secret Soviet agent.

May, who teaches at Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., was at the University of California in the late thirties. So was Weinberg, who now teaches at the University of Minnesota.

Although May was a Communist Party member at one time, he said he severed connection with it before serving for three years with the United States Army. He was a mountain trooper and was in the invasions of Kiska and Italy.

May, who was represented by Attorney Sidney S. Sachs, declined to tell reporters why he decided to leave the Communist Party.

"I do not wish to discuss anything of a political nature or concerning testimony I am to give before the grand jury," he said. "I am answering all questions asked by the grand jury, however."

'He'll Get By,' Says Mother of Amputee

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

"Get by?"

"You bet he'll get by. Why, he's got the 'git' in him. He'll get there. If he'd had his legs, he would have gotten up and walked out of there."

Mrs. Clara Smith, 55, of Middleburg, Pa., mother of three sons and two daughters, sat quietly as she talked. She had just come from a reunion with one of her sons—the first quadruple amputee of the Korean war. Another son is now fighting in Korea.

It was Pfc. Robert L. Smith, who lost both arms and legs after he was wounded last month, that she so confidently predicts will "get by."

When she saw him yesterday in a room at Walter Reed General Hospital, she seemed to know that. The boy on the bed, with the dark brown hair, the dark blue eyes, and a nice smile on his young face, did too.

"Hi, Mom," he said quietly.

"Hello, Bob," she said. Neither wept.

During the day, mother and son talked about a "little of everything." Together they pieced together what had been before only fragments of Smith's story.

Decided to Enlist

It began, really, back in Middleburg early this year, when Bob, and two good friends of his decided to enlist in the Engineers Corps and learn a trade—make a career of the Army.

But all three wound up in the infantry. And eight months later, on September 19, Smith, an infantryman with the Seventh Division, had arrived somewhere near the thirty-seventh parallel in Korea.

On December 7, Smith, after being wounded, both arms and legs frozen, and imprisoned by the Communists, was picked up by the First Marine Division and flown to Japan, where his limbs were amputated.

Smith told this story to his mother, and also to a Walter Reed Hospital representative. "I was only in three battles," he said. "And all the enemy was in civilian clothes. You hate to fire on a civilian."

He was hit in the right wrist November 27. A buddy patched it up for him. He found a ditch to lie in, covered himself with a poncho. "There was a medic there, but every time I started to call him I heard someone else call, and I figured they were worse off than me."

For three days he lay in the ditch. He couldn't move his fingers. Chinese Communists came each day to search him. One took his gloves. Finally, he dragged himself to a house. He found wounded GIs there, and a few Communists.

The house had no windows. It was deadly cold. For 11 days Smith stayed in that house, and every day the "Commie kicked me around a little." It made him "dizzy and pretty mad, too."

Now he is back in the States. He can scratch his nose with the stump of his arm. When he greeted his mother he tried to raise himself off his pillow, didn't quite make it.

What will he do now? When he gets out of the hospital he wants a job. But, he said, "I want to see how I react before I can plan.

"They tell me I'll be able to walk and that I'll get hands almost as good as my own, but I'm wondering if I'll be able to use them. I guess if others have learned to use them, I will too. Anyhow, it's sure good to be back."

Fund for Smith Started By Washington Legion

A Robert L. Smith fund has been initiated by the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion, Walter Morgan, D. C. department commander, said yesterday.

Morgan explained the fund would be used to assist in Smith's rehabilitation and will be "composed of contributions from the warmhearted people of the District of Columbia, who wish to provide a future for this heroic boy." Checks should be made payable to the Robert L. Smith Fund, American Legion, and sent to D. C. Department Headquarters, 2437 15th st. nw.

Mrs. Clara Smith, mother of the amputee, was flown here yesterday in a plane provided by the Pennsylvania Department of the American Legion.

Civil Defense Bill's Details Agreed Upon

By the United Press

Senate and House conferees agreed yesterday on a sweeping civil defense bill aimed at preparing the Nation's cities and industrial centers to cope with atomic, gas or germ attacks.

The measure, which will launch a $3.1 billion three-year program of Federal and State preparedness, is slated for final Congressional action January 2, last day of the "lame duck" session.

Approval by both houses is considered certain, and President Truman is sure to sign, since the bill is an Administration "must."

The legislation creates an independent Civil Defense Administration, under a $17,500-a-year chief with almost unlimited powers, to rush resources of the Federal Government to the aid of any attacked city.

The President has created the new agency by executive action and put Millard F. Caldwell, jr., former Governor of Florida, in charge. The bill gives the agency legal status and broad emergency powers.

Based on differing House and Senate bills, the measure provides for large-scale construction of air raid shelters, stockpiling of civil defense materials and creation of a Nationwide warning network.

The conferees agreed to let the Reconstruction Finance Corp. lend cities up to $250 million for civil defense projects, such as underground garages and subways that could double as raid shelters.

The Government also would be permitted to make outright grants for portions of such projects built entirely for civil defense reasons.

Here's how the powers contained in the bill would go into effect:

The President, on proclaiming a "civil defense" emergency, could grant his Civil Defense Administrator almost unlimited authority to aid critical target areas. These include seizure of equipment or facilities and mobilization of the entire Federal Government for civil defense.

Safety Up to Citizens, Civilian Chief Warns

By the United Press

Millard F. Caldwell, Civil Defense Administrator, said last night most Americans will have to look out for their own safety in event of atomic attack.

"It would be impossible to finance a shelter program which would adequately protect all the people of this country," he said in a radio interview over the Mutual Broadcasting System. "The American people will have to depend, very largely, on their own resources."

He added his agency is preparing a booklet to tell civilians how to plan for their own protection, including building of home bomb shelters.

St. John's Student Asserts 'Right' to Break Draft Law

BALTIMORE, Dec. 28 (AP).—A freshman at St. John's College in Annapolis, accused of draft evasion, proclaimed in court today his belief in a right to break "any law which affronts me as a human being."

Eighteen-year-old Larry Atkins, of Baltimore, pleaded innocent to a charge of failing to register under the 1948 Selective Service Act.

He denied he was evading the draft and said he had informed his draft board and President Truman that he did not intend to register.

The FBI, which arrested Atkins yesterday, said he wrote the President a letter which said: "I merely wish to live in peace and, as I believe military preparedness leads only to war, I cannot become a part of it."

He told United States Commissioner Ernest Volkart at today's hearing that he objected to being "made part of a machine if I don't choose to, especially if it is part of an execution and design to kill my fellows."

Asked by Assistant United States Attorney Frederick J. Green if he felt he should choose which laws to obey, Atkins replied:

"I feel any law which affronts me as a human being I have a right to break. I think I have a right to break a law providing I do not run from the punishment."

Richard D. Weigle, president of St. John's, said Atkins' stand "is dissociated" from the college.

"It represents his own personal conviction, and I understand it is shared by members of his family who are members of the Fellowship Reconciliation," Weigle said.

Atkins, however, said at the hearing that his objections to draft registration are not based on religion and that nobody influenced him. He said he believed "a given individual is most important in any society or State."

The Government asked that Atkins' bail be set at $5000, but Commissioner Volkart halved that amount when relatives of the defendant said that is all they can raise. Atkins, first Maryland resident charged with draft evasion since the 1948, was ordered held for Federal grand jury action.

Korean Casualties Now 38,325, Sixth Of World War I's

Officially reported American casualties in Korea totaled 38,325 through last Friday—nearly one sixth of the U. S. total of dead and wounded in World War I.

The Defense Department released the latest casualty figures yesterday on what is already the fourth bloodiest war in the Nation's history.

They included 5742 killed in action, 27,012 wounded in action and 5571 missing in action.

However, 864 of the wounded died and six reported missing later died, so the total deaths reported actually are 6432.

The Army suffered 32,066 of the casualties released today, including 5186 of the deaths. The Marine Corps had 5524 casualties, including 1079 deaths. The Air Force listed 306 casualties, of which 108 were deaths. The Navy had 429 casualties, including 59 deaths.

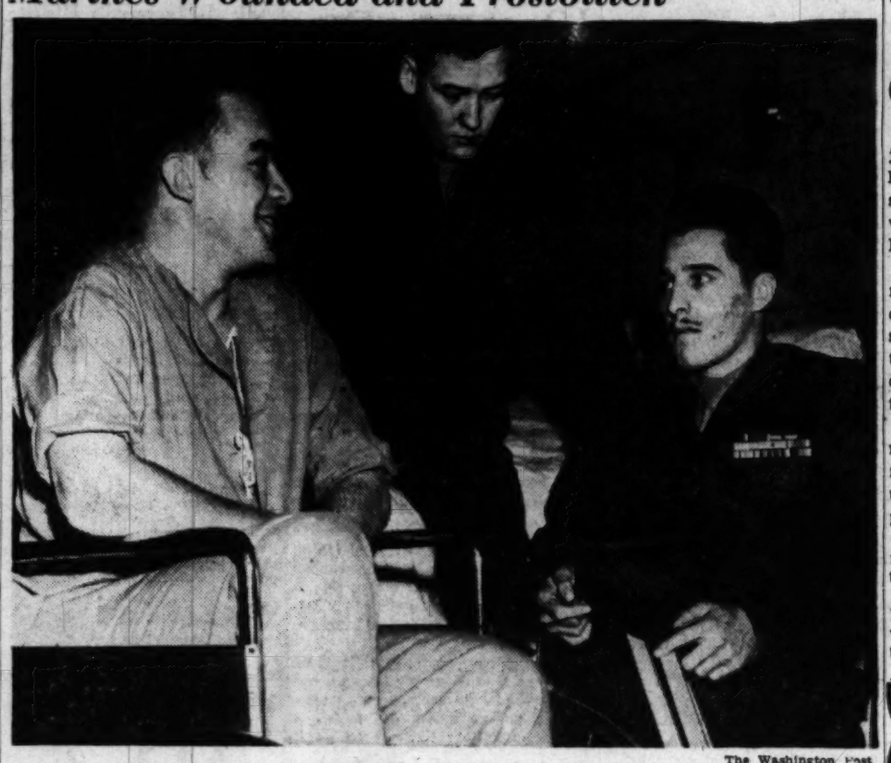
Marines Wounded and Frostbitten



The Washington Post

UNDER CARE HERE—Three Marines who suffered wounds and frost bite in Korea were in Bethesda Naval Hospital yesterday. Left to right, Corpl. Philip D. Sumner, jr., Corpl. Charles H. Warden and Pfc. Robert Gomez. All are residents of the Washington area

Corpl. Philip David Sumner, jr., 20, of 5305 Fisher rd., Temple Hills, Md., gets around in a wheel chair. He was shot in the lower left leg.

Sumner arrived in Korea at Inchon on September 18 with the Seventh Regiment, First Marine Division, and was among troops that led the push into northeast Korea. "I was lucky all the way up from Inchon," he said, until the night of November 27 when he was firing a mortar near the Changjin reservoir.

He was in a truck convoy for four days, being evacuated to Hagaru, N. Korea, whence he was flown to Japan then to the United States, reaching the medical center in time to see his family on Christmas.

Sumner was born in Mexico City, where his father, Phillip D. Sumner, was in the consular service.

Corpl. Charles H. Warden, 20, of 912 Stafford st. S. Arlington, was wounded in the back and right arm September 19 near Seoul by an artillery shell four days after he landed at Inchon with the First Regiment, First Division. He was evacuated to Inchon and later to Japan.

A native of Ryan, Okla., Warden enlisted in the Marine Corps in San Diego, Calif., in 1947 and was stationed at the Marine Barracks here from September 1949 to July of this year. While in Washington he met the girl he later married. His wife, Mrs. Evelyn V. Warden, lives at the Arlington address. She is a typist at Marine Corps headquarters.

Warden arrived at the medical center two days before Christmas, and was given a special liberty to go home for the holiday.

The third local Marine at the medical center is Pfc. Robert R. Gomez, 23, of 2316 41st st. nw., moves about nimbly on crutches.

A native of Omaha, Nebr., Gomez was shot in the left hip during a Red attack on October 2, while fighting with the Seventh Regiment, First Divison. He was sent to a field hospital, then to Japan for treatment, to Oakland, Calif., and was home in time for Christmas.

Pfc. Gomez and his wife Mary have a girl two years old.

50 Red Jets Reported Seen Over Korea

About 50 Russian-built MIG-15 jet fighters appeared over the Korean battlefront Wednesday but showed an unwillingness to tangle with American planes, the Air Force announced yesterday.

A spokesman said the Communist planes, in groups of 10 to 14 climbed to about 20,000 feet on the safety of the Manchurian side of the border, made a quick pass over Korea, and then hurried back to their refuge.

He was unable to explain the reluctance of the enemy planes to fight United States' jets which usually patrol the border in four-plane flights.

General MacArthur has orders not to permit his pilots to cross the Manchurian border.

(Tokyo dispatches said two MIG-15 jets were destroyed and a third was damaged in air fights near the border Thursday.)

Army Short of Combat Boots, Gloves for Trainees in U. S.

The Army, which was selling combat boots, gloves and other items as surplus prior to the Korean war, disclosed yesterday it does not have enough of these items for new trainees.

A spokesman said the necessity for rushing clothing and supplies to troops in Korea resulted in "temporary shortages in sizes of some items, particularly in combat boots and gloves" for troops training in this country.

The Army said the boot shortage was met by temporarily using service shoes and World War II-type leggings. The glove shortage is being met by special purchases.

Supplies of both winter and summer clothing are sufficient to meet all overseas demands, a spokesman said. Shortages reported in Korea, he said, were the result of distribution problems.

Requisitions from the Far East have been met without regard to the impact on supplies here, he said. With new supplies rolling in, the shortage here should be made up in four weeks.

Sergeant Prefers Wedded Bliss to West Point Life

CAMP PICKETT, Va., Dec. 28 (AP).—Sergt. William L. Bickford prefers his status as a mess sergeant, married, to the bachelorhood of a West Point cadet.

The 18-year-old Glover (Vt.) soldier of the 43d Winged Victory Division here passed screening tests and was invited to appear before an examining board for entrance to the United States Military Academy.

But West Point doesn't admit married men.

Bickford was married Christmas Eve to Miss Arlene Rogers, his "steady" since they were freshmen at Barton Academy

Commander Terms Evacuation Flawless

TOKYO, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—The epic evacuation of Hungnam means that with enough naval gun support offshore, ground troops could hold a 10-mile beachhead perimeter "indefinitely," the amphibious expert who commanded the operation is convinced.

Rear Admiral James H. Doyle, commander of the United States Amphibious Forces in the Far East, described the evacution which he commanded in a press conference here today.

The Navy, Doyle said, is proud of the fact that the entire operation went off without a hitch even though its planning and execution were carried out almost simultaneously — and he emphasized that the lessons learned would be invaluable in future warfare of the sort.

It was then that Doyle said he was convinced that troops could hold even a tiny perimeter with the Navy's aid.

Nearly 250,000 United Nations troops and friendly civilians as well as thousands of tons of equipment were evacuated from the beachhead in the mammoth two-weeks operation.

"I wish to emphasize that we did it the way we planned," Doyle said. "We were in complete control of the situation at all times and at no time was the enemy able to dictate our maneuvers."

He described in matter-of-fact phrases the entire dramatic operation.

He told how the Navy's guns and airplanes covered the beachhead and held back the thrusting Chinese Communists. The Chinese, he said, could be seen on the hills back of the perimeter less than 10 minutes after the stubborn little rear guard withdrew under cover of the Navy's barrage.

The entire operation was a reverse-action amphibious assault in all respects, he said, since "we were constantly weakening ourselves ashore by the steady withdrawal of troops and artillery and shrinking of the perimeter."

This necessitated the "constant step-up of naval fire support to replace the loss of shore artillery," he said. The ever-increasing naval barrage was carried out day and night throughout the withdrawal.

The last two men in each withdrawing column carried panels to signal their progress to the air cover which had been maintained over the beachhead, Doyle said.

Civilians streaming on all roads into the Hungnam area posed a terrific problem for pilots, he said. The fliers had to determine "whom to cut loose on."

Russia Warned On Japan Pact

would not permit Japanese rearmament, and indicated that the American desire for a trusteeship over the Ryukyu and Bonin islands was nothing but a wish for "territorial expansion."

Yesterday the United States went to the mat with the Russians on the subject, and indicated that it would go ahead without the Russians, if necessary, in concluding an early treaty with the former Japanese enemy.

No One-Power Treaty

"The United States does not accept the thesis, often put forward by the Soviet Union, that there cannot be peace except on terms that one power dictates," the American reply declared.

"Japan, after its defeat, has now for over five years loyally complied with the agreed terms of surrender and is entitled to peace. The United States should be glad to know whether it is the view of the Soviet Union that there can never be any peace with Japan, unless terms can be found which are fully satisfactory to each one of the 47 nations that signed or adhered to the declaration of January 1, 1942."

This was the original United Nations declaration which pledged its signers not to make a separate peace.

The American memorandum was still more blunt in its references to Japan's future security, and even threw some of Joseph Stalin's words back at the Russians to support the American case.

"It is the view of the United States Government," the memorandum said, "that, upon the conclusion of a peace settlement, the military occupation of Japan would cease.

"The fact that a 'new order of peace, security and justice,' as envisaged in the Potsdam Declaration [of 1945], has not been established, and that irresponsible militarism has not been driven from the world, would at the same time make it reasonable for Japan to participate with the United States and other nations in arrangements for individual and collective self-defense, such as are envisaged by the United Nations Charter and particularly Article 51 thereof."

Troops for Japan

"These arrangements could include provision for the stationing in Japan of troops of the United States and other nations.

"The United States does not propose for Japan a peace settlement which will deny to Japan what Prime Minister Stalin has described (March 10, 1939) as 'the policy of collective security, the policy of collective resistance to the aggressors.' "

This was the first time the United States had ever come so close to saying officially that it wanted the right to keep American troops in a post-treaty Japan.

It is a sensitive subject for Russia and for Communist China, for the Soviet-Chinese treaty of early this year provides for automatic help in case either partner is attacked from Japan.

The American memorandum to Malik stated other American positions which have already run into sharp opposition from Moscow.

Among them were these:

1. The Three-Power Cairo Declaration of 1943, like the Yalta and Potsdam agreements of wartime, should be "subject to any final peace settlement," and the views of other allies who were not represented at the wartime conferences must not be "wholly ignored."

2. An American trusteeship over the Ryukyu and Bonin islands would not be "territorial expansion;" the fact that these islands were not mentioned at Cairo or Potsdam does not exclude them from consideration in a peace settlement.

3. The Japanese peace treaty "should not limit the Japanese peacetime economy nor deny Japan access to sources of raw material or participation in world trade."

There was also a cutting reminder that the United States has no diplomatic relations with "the so-called 'government of the Chinese People's Republic,' and that, therefore, the present diplomatic exchanges could not include Communist China, as the Russians had proposed."

The memorandum ended with elaborate politeness that may have had sarcasm in it. For it expressed the "earnest hope" of a "desire and intention of the Soviet Union not only to enter into discussions of a peace treaty for Japan but to act in cooperation with other nations at war with Japan to make peace a reality."

So far American officials have seen no sign of such a "desire and intention," and are ready to speed up the conclusion of a treaty whether Russia likes it or not.

German Scientists Ask A-Research Plant

DUESSELDORF, Dec. 28 (AP).—A group of German scientists today proposed the erection of a small German atomic plant for peaceful purposes.

The "Working Group of Research Science" was founded by Karl Arnold, Christian Democratic minister president of the British Zone state of Northrhine-Westphalia.

A spokesman said a small plant would enable German physicists to make use of atomic power of tests for technical, medical and agricultural purposes.

imminent on the western front.

A spokesman for the Eighth Army officially denied Thursday that his headquarters had announced that troops tentatively identified as Chinese had crossed the thirty-eighth parallel in force.

The parallel, once the arbitrary boundary between Red North and Republican South Korea, roughly marks the present fighting front.

Corsairs Hit Kaesong

Red patrols have been probing across the line for several days, however, and Communist troops have occupied Kaesong, two miles south of the parallel and 40 road miles northwest of Seoul.

U. N. forces withdrew from Kaesong five days ago. Reds immediately moved in against no opposition.

Reds in the city, an ancient capital of a Korean kingdom, were strafed Thursday by United States Navy Corsair pilots.

Kaesong's location, astride one of the main highway and rail routes from North Korea to Seoul, could make it an important massing point for the Red hordes girding for an expected fullscale drive against the U. N. defense line.

Two Chinese Communist armies of 30,000 men each are reported deployed in attack formation on a line 35 miles north of Seoul and close to the parallel.

General MacArthur said in a statistical review of Chinese Red army movements that four more armies were moving up in support.

The combined force—19 divisions or up to 190,000 men—could strike southward across the parallel in force any time after January 1, MacArthur said.

He added that the Reds could make "limited" assaults at any time.

MacArthur said also that Red China was directing operations of the Communist armies in Korea and that the Chinese government in Peiping had appropriated 8 billion Chinese silver dollars (roughly 4 billion dollars) for war purposes in 1951, "probably the biggest military budget in Chinese history."

Associated Press Correspondent Jack Macbeth reported from the front north of Seoul Thursday:

"Nowhere along the front does one hear any talk of withdrawal or retreat. These men believe they have the stuff to stop any new thrust and make it extremely expensive for the enemy."

Macbeth quoted an American division commander as saying: "There are a lot of Chinamen here, but they are going to know they have been in a fight."

Associated Press Correspondent William J. Waugh reported from Seoul that the South Korean government had completed four foot bridges across the Han River for use of civilians fleeing southward. More than half the city's one million residents already have moved out.

Waugh said most of the refugees were stopping within 30 miles south of Seoul.

The people leaving the citw were reported carrying only a few belongings. Most were leaving their homes intact, apparently hoping to return.

Little looting was reported, and the black market was practically nonexistent.

MacArthur's statistical review threw the lie at Communist China's claims that the one million Red Chinese troops on the battle line and in reserve are "volunteers."

He detailed the deployment of all or elements of the Chinese Third and Fourth Field armies for a Korean strike, and said the two armies represented "two out of the five field armies constituting the entire military structure of China."

MacArthur estimated that 19 Chinese divisions, which usually number 10,000 men each, could launch a coordinated attack against United States Eighth Army positions between January 1 and 10.

He said last known locations of the 19 divisions placed them in positions to mount a major offensive by the first of the year.

Red troops from the Hungnam area, who drove U. N. forces out of their last stronghold in North Korea, could be shifted south as reinforcements for the 19 divisions, MacArthur said.

Far East Bombing Command Headquarters announced B-29s worked close to enemy lines Thursday, blasting three towns along the main north-south highway and railway from Pyongyang to Seoul and a fourth town in central Korea.

Pleven Makes Plea For Arms Budget

PARIS, Dec. 28 (AP).—Premier Rene Pleven warned tonight that any cut in French rearmament plans would endanger American military aid to France.

The warning was given to a closed meeting of the National Assembly's Finance Committee. It was learned, however, that Pleven predicted new talks would have to be held with the United States if Parliament fails to give him the money he wants.

He told economy-minded committeemen that the armed forces budget already had been cut to 740 billion francs (about $2,100,000,000) from 870 billion francs (nearly $2,500,000,000). Further than that, he said, he could not go.

France is counting in her budget on 140 billion francs (400 million dollars) worth of arms aid from the United States in 1951—only half of which has been voted by Congress.

Pleven scored a victory when the committee approved a project designed to raise 145 billion francs ($420,500,000) in new taxes for rearmament. The vote was reported variously at 19 to 17 or 18 to 14—but in any case a close decision.

Pleven held an impromptu news conference tonight in the corridors of the National Assembly. Asked about reports that President Truman was to ask funds for a huge new rearmament program, he answered with a wry smile:

"He's luckier than we are. He's already had his elections."

French deputies are wary of voting new taxes because they must go before the voters in 1951.

Pleven has pledged the life of his middle-of-the-road cabinet, however, on getting the budget through. The vote may come Saturday or Sunday.

Political experts considered Plevin fairly certain of a majority, despite the combined opposition of Communists who want no rearmament at all and right-wingers who want to spend even more.

The increased taxes will mostly affect corporations and industrial production. There is also a plan, however, to raise the price of gasoline three and a half francs a liter (about four cents a gallon).

Tito Warns of Red Neighbors' Big Armies

BELGRADE, Dec. 28 (AP).—Premier Marshall Tito told the Yugoslav Parliament and people tonight that the Soviet Union and its Cominform satellites are plotting to "swallow" this country.

Tito declared that Yugoslavia's borders were directly menaced by armies totalling around 660,000 men in neighboring Cominform states. He appealed to the people of these countries to make their leaders "abandon the threats of war and return to the past of friendly cooperation."

He declared that armed defense against this threat of aggression demanded great sacrifices from all the people.

"We want peace," Tito asserted, "but we don't want peace at any price because that means enslavement."

He addressed Parliament as it took up consideration of the 1951 budget, which contains a record outlay for military spending. The projected defense appropriation is 29,100,000,00 dinars ($582 million) of 16.9 percent of the total national budget.

The Yugoslav commander-in-chief declared these increased defense appropriations were necessary because of the war preparations of Yugoslavia's Soviet-led Cominform neighbors, chiefly Romania, Hungary and Bulgaria.

"The Cominform," he said, "is constantly waging hostile provocations against Yugoslavia and has permtited 1397 incidents on our borders from July, 1948, until the middle of December this year.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THE DISTRICT Commissioners have rescued us from a fate worse than last year's New Year's Eve. It was a Saturday night, and every glass of high-proof cheer had to be whisked away by 11:45 for the midnight curfew.

This time, New Year's Eve is on a Sunday, and only beer and light wines can be had that day—short of getting Congress to change a law. But Monday's rues are up to District Commissioners, and they sympathetically declared 12:01 a. m. the legal time to begin serving drinks on January 1.

Oddly enough, after the Hotel Association of Washington requested the change, few hotels are making use of it. The Shoreham is carrying on the New Year's Eve tradition almost alone.

For 20 years it has provided a party for its guests, and it refused to be stopped by the economics of a Sunday night affair (without the profit of selling liquor before 12, the take will be small.)

Both rooms will be open. Barnee will reign in his very special way in the Blue Room. There the charge will be $10. It covers everything, including dinner, except drinks. In the Palladian Room, Sande Williams plays, and there is a cover charge, with dinners until 9:30 p. m.

The Hotel 2400 also will be open, with two floor shows and supper for $6.50 in the Lounge Riviera.

The night club prospect is more heartening. The Old New Orleans has Dwight Fiske, appearing for this week only, and a European dance team—Lida and Yianni—which is exceptional. The upstairs Latin Quarter will be open.

Bob Simpsom's band, one of the best here, is at the Casino Royal now, and also in the New Year's Eve festivities there is the original "Mister 5 x 5." The 350-pound Russ Brown, composer of that autobiographical ditty, opened in the floor show this week. The Casino Royal will open its bar at 12.01, as will the Lotus.

The Neptune Room, ideal for an inexpensive and merry celebration, and with the Bill Thompson Trio and Pianist Ethel Gunderson, will stay open until 2, as will its sister restaurant next door, the Balkan Room.

The Kavakos has Ray Eberly, brother of Bob Eberly and former crooner with Jimmy Dorsey's band, in its show; also Divena, an "aqua-tease" artist. A tank of water is her stage prop. Mousie Garner, comedian, and a dancer complete the bill.

Bank Reserves Upped In Fight on Inflation

The Federal Reserve Board last night brought into action one of its most powerful anti-inflationary weapons by ordering a 2 percent increase in the reserve requirements of its member banks.

The action is expected to absorb some 2 billion dollars from the banks, and by that process to dry up some 12 billion dollars of actual and potential lending.

The reserve requirements are a certain percentage of commercial banks' deposits which must be kept with the Federal Reserve Banks.

Until last night, the required reserves for banks in New York and Chicago were 22 percent, for those in most of the Nation's large cities were 18 percent, and for "country banks"—all the rest—were 12 percent.

Whenever a bank makes a loan, deposits rise, initially for that bank, for the most part, and in any event, for the banking system taken as a whole. Therefore, when a bank lends, it usually has to increase its deposit with the Federal Reserve Bank by about one-sixth the amount of the loan, on a national average.

Thus, absorbing an additional two billion dollars of funds from commercial banks, the Federal Reserve cuts down their total lending power by about six times that amount.

The Reserve Board explained its order was "a further step toward restraining inflationary expansion of bank credit." Its statement noted that loans by members of the Reserve System alone—less than half the total number of banks, but doing 85 percent of the total lending—increased by about seven billion dollars since the Korean outbreak.

"This is an unprecedented rate of expansion and has contributed to an excessive rise in the money supply," the board said.

It added it hopes by raising reserve requirements to "reduce the ability of banks further to expand credit that would add to inflationary pressures."

"The increase," it continued, "is timed so as to absorb reserves coming into the banks from the post-holiday return flow of currency."

The freezing of funds will diminish the ability of banks to make any kind of loan—to business concerns, to consumers for financing retail purchases, buying homes or buying securities on the stock exchanges.

There was nothing in the order by itself that would affect interest rates on loans.

The order provides that, on demand deposits, meaning checking accounts, New York and Chicago banks must increase posted reserves from the present level of 22 percent of the total to 23 percent on January 11, and on January 25 raise the posted amount to 24 percent. The maximum requirement the board could order under the law would be 26 percent for these banks.

"Reserve city" banks—which are banks in most larger cities outside of New York and Chicago—must raise their posted amount of demand deposits from the present 18 percent to 19 percent on January 11, and to 20 percent on January 25. Twenty percent is the maximum for these banks.

"Country banks" must raise their posted amount of demand deposits from the present 12 to 13 percent on January 16, and raise it again to 14 percent—the maximum—on February 1.

All three classes of Federal Reserve member banks will be required to raise the posted amount on time deposits (savings accounts) from the present 5 to 6 percent. The country banks must do so on January 16, the other two classes on January 11.

day's order gives it virtually full control of the distribution of all rubber.

The step was taken, NPA and GSA said, to "safeguard the supply and assure that it is distributed and utilized most advantageously to the national defense."

For the moment, at least, the action will not mean any change in the amounts of natural or synthetic rubber going to manufacturers. Those amounts are determined by the NPA. Month by month, it sets a percentage of a base period consumption volume which may be used for non-military production.

Currently, the figure is 100 percent, letting producers use as much rubber—although a much larger ratio of synthetic—as they did during the first six months of 1950.

One effect of the order will be to eliminate individual private and competing American bidders from the international rubber markets, a move that may help hold down skyrocketing rubber prices. The order also apparently looks forward to, and facilitates, the establishment of an international materials allocation mechanism of the sort agreed on at the Truman-Attlee conferences earlier this month.

Depends on Government Control

Any such mechanism, to be effective, is predicated on complete control by the various governments of the raw materials that are bought and sold.

The anti-hoarding order has little if any direct effect on the ordinary citizen and householder. The materials designated are for the most part basic industrial commodities—almost all the metals, major and minor; some building materials, chemicals, minerals, metal scrap and even hog bristles—none likely to be found under any circumstances on housewives' shelves.

Under the order, no one may hold an amount of the material in excess of "reasonable demands of business, personal or home consumption," and no one may hold the designated items for speculative purposes, that is, with the idea of reselling them at higher prices later.

Violations can be punished with a year's imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

Red China To Seize U. S. Assets

HONGKONG (Friday), Dec. 29 (AP).—The Chinese Communist regime Thursday ordered immediate seizure of all United States property and all private and commercial American bank deposits in Red China. (There was no estimate of the amount involved.)

Premier-Foreign Minister Chou En-lai, who announced the action said it was in retaliation for similar American action December 16 on Chinese Red assets in the United States.

The Chinese action was announced in a Peiping broadcast heard in Hongkong this morning.

It directed "local people's governments" throughout Red China to make immediate inventories of all American properties, but said American firms in China and Americans living in the country would be allowed to draw from local bank accounts enough funds for their living expenses and "to maintain lawful merchants." Amounts of such withdrawals "will be regulated by a separate order," the announcement stated.

First reaction in Hongkong was that the property seizure would be of prime importance, and perhaps would drive out of China altogether missionary establishments, the big three oil companies and the American-financed Shanghai Utilities Co.

The three major oil companies which have been represented in China are Caltex, a subsidiary of Standard of California and the Texas Company; Standard Vacuum, a subsidiary of Standard of New Jersey and Socony Vacuum; and the Shell Oil Company.

The seizure also apparently means the Peiping regime is taking over the extensive United States Embassy properties which have been under the care of British diplomats.

Fire Equipment Flown to Bermuda For Ship Blaze

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 28 (AP).—The Coast Guard here reported tonight that a Swedish freighter is afire at a dock in Bermuda and that the ship's second officer has been killed fighting the flames.

A Coast Guard spokesman identified the ship as the SS Thai, 5553 tons, and said it was loaded with milo maize, a type of corn. The fire was said to be in the vessel's No. 4 hold.

Fire-fighting equipment was dispatched by plane from Norfolk and arrived in Bermuda, at Kindley Field, at 8:17 p. m., the Coast Guard said. Included in the equipment rushed from here were six carbon dioxide masks and six asbestos suits.

The Coast Guard identified the killed officer as F. Salkloo. It said it was informed by Kindley Field that six crewmen of the freighter also were overcome by smoke and fumes while fighting the fire, but had been revived.

Wage Board Calls Leaders To Meetings

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Government yesterday called industry and labor representatives to a series of meetings that appear to be the first steps toward a national wage stabilization policy.

The summons was issued by Cyrus H. Ching, chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board. The conferences will be held January 10, 11 and 12, with separate meetings by the nine-man board with representatives of each of five different labor organizations and four management groups.

Ching wired them that the board "is undertaking a study of the principal questions which are involved in the formulation of a general wage stabilization policy" and wants to obtain the views of representative labor and management groups.

Ching does not expect these meetings to hammer out a national policy to keep wages level. But he hopes to get enough points of view from them to see what sort of a plan would be workable.

Questions to Be Discussed

Among questions that will obviously be discussed are the "escalator" clauses which provide automatic increases for cost-of-living rises and improvements in productivity, correction of inequitable and substandard wages, and regional and industrial differences in pay scales.

Although it is possible for the Wage Stabilization Board to emerge with a policy for holding wage rates in the short term—as it did with the auto workers last week—it cannot provide a formula for freezes if the cost of living continues to increase.

But the law that prescribes authority for wage and price controls does not permit the fixing of rents, which account for about 13 percent of the cost of living, nor can food prices, accounting for about 40 percent of living costs, be controlled until they rise on the average, a great deal higher than they are now.

Thus it seems likely the Wage Stabilization Board may come up with a proposal for holding wages provided the law is changed so all cost-of-living items can be controlled. In the absence of that, the board may recommended that wages change to offset living-cost increases.

List of Those Invited

Labor representatives invited included William Green, president of the AFL; Philip Murray, president, CIO; A. J. Hayes, president of the Independent Machinists; George Leighty, chairman, Railway Labor Executives' Association, and John L. Lewis, president, United Mine Workers.

Industry people to whom Ching sent telegrams were Marion B. Folsom, chairman, Committee for Economic Development; William H. Ruffin, president, National Association of Manufacturers; Otto A. Seyferth, president, United States Chamber of Commerce, and Herschel Atkinson, president, Council of State Chambers of Commerce.

A different sort of labor problem—what was called "priorities unemployment" in World War II—began to emerge yesterday. Because of shortages in available materials for nonmilitary production, three auto companies announced layoffs.

One was Studebaker, which will cut production 20 percent in January. Packard announced a cut of the same amount, starting January 2, and Ford said 1000 employes of its Metuchen, N. J., Lincoln-Mercury division would be laid off.

Fire Razes Gas Plant

MALDEN, Mass., Dec. 28 (AP).—Fire and a series of explosions destroyed the New England Gas Products Co., Inc., plant today with a loss estimated at more than $100,000. The building's lone occupant suffered minor burns.

South Korean Police Arrest Red Legislator

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 28 (AP).—National police here disclosed today the arrest of Suh Byung Soo, 46, member of the North Korean Communist legislature.

South Korean railroad police arrested Suh Sunday at Pusan, where he landed December 20 with North Korean refugees from the Hungnam and Wonsan areas on the east coast, the National police said.

Suh was further identified as president of Wonsan Medical College.

Remington Not 'Orthodox' Red

scribed it, between the couple and the party.

He brought out that she "just didn't take orders" from the Communists she said ran the Washington Peace Mobilization in 1942 and therefore she was "eased out" as executive secretary of the group in favor of a Mrs. Montgomery whose husband "was active in the Agriculture Department."

Chanler got her to admit that while on their Mexican honeymoon in 1939 they looked up and talked with a Trotskyite to whom Artist George Biddle, brother of former Attorney General Francis Biddle, had given them a letter of introduction—this despite the fact that associating with a Trotskyite was considered one of the worst possible offenses for a pro-Soviet Communist.

Insists They Met Miss Bentley

He also got Mrs. Remington to admit that her ex-husband read the anti-Communist book "Assignment in Utopia" while a Dartmouth student; that the Communist rallies they attended at Madison Garden were open to the public; that he was reluctant to pay Communist dues because "he didn't like to spend money for any purpose" and that he arbitrarily set the dues Mrs. Remington said she paid to Elizabeth Bentley despite Communist by-laws which call for setting dues by a complicated formula based on income.

But Mrs. Remington stuck to her story that she and her ex-husband met several times in Washington in 1942 with Miss Bentley, confessed ex-Communist courier, and that at one of these meetings Remington handed over a secret formula. Yesterday she had testified that it was for making explosives out of garbage; today she said she thought it was for making synthetic rubber. Nonetheless, she reiterated her earlier contention that Remington thought it was a secret formula of value that should be sped to the Russians as soon as possible.

Chanler indicated he would produce witnesses to show the formula "was nothing but a crackpot idea" and that there never was anything secret about it.

Story Differs on Name

At one point Mrs. Remington said that Remington arranged for Miss Bentley to use the name "Helen Johnson" in phoning him at his war production board office to make appointments. Yesterday she testified she had not heard the name "Johnson" used for Miss Bentley.

After Chandler read from the 1938 Communist party by-laws requirements for membership applicants to have two party endorsements, for regular payment of dues and for pasting dues stamps in membership books, Mrs. Remington said she and her ex-husband fullfilled none of these conditions.

Chanler then said:

"So neither you nor the defendant were members of the Communist party within the meaning of the party constitution?"

To which she replied:

"We were not orthodox Communists who followed all the rules . . . we were Communists just as much as we wanted to be."

Saypol contended that membership in the sense prescribed by the party constitution was not the issue in the case but Chanler said that it was.

Whether it is or not may have to be decided in the end by the United States Supreme Court since Remington is charged with lying about his party membership and the Government has refused in this trial to define party membership. Judge Noonan has upheld that position.

Importance of that point goes beyond Remington's own fate because of the requirements of the recent subversives control law (the McCarren act) that Communists must register with the Government. Hence the importance of just what constitutes being a member of the Communist party.

Chanler ended his day and a half of cross examination by delving into the Remingtons" 1947 separation and subsequent divorce. When Chanler suggested there was bitterness between them, she said she was "upset" by Remington's grand jury testimony about her. This was read to her, she said, when she appeared before that body.

It was "wild statements' to that jury by Remington that led her, she said, to give up her idea of "defending my husband's position as a fellow traveler close to but not in the party."

She said she first had consulted two Washington attorneys, Foster Hagan and Carl Beruefty. She added that Thomas Donegan, an assistant to the Attorney General, had told her Remington would "not have been in this mess' if he had resigned from the Government sooner than he did and not lied about his past.

Mrs. Remington told of seeing a Dr. Nobel, a Washington psychiatrist. Chanler asked if it were not true that she was under treatment for "mental and emotional disturbances" but she replied that she had thought it would do her good and that it had done so.

At Saypol's questioning, she added that Remington had suggested she have him prove her "mentally incompetent." She said Remington was seeing two psychiatrists, Drs. Weiniger and Lebowitz, not otherwise identified.

Judge Noonan at the end of the day recessed the trial until next Tuesday.

Bids Are Advertised On Divided Highway

BALTIMORE, Dec. 28 (AP).—The States Roads Commission advertised today for bids on construction of a divided highway along Georgia avenue, State Route 97, in Montgomery County.

The project will extend from Viers Mill rd. about two miles northwest to Glenmont. It includes grading, draining, and surfacing with reinforced cement concrete. Bids on the work will be opened January 23.

'Car of Future' To Test Radical Jet Design

La Sabre, made of light alloys, styled like a jet plane

DETROIT, Dec. 28 (AP).—A lot of [illegible] are to be tried out in a new experimental test car being built by General Motors.

The brain-child of Harley J. Earl, GM vice president in charge of styling, the car is a low, sleek sports unit with sweeping lines that give it the appearance of many recent concepts of "the car of the future." Earl says it is the car of the future only in the sense that some of its design or mechanical features may appear some day in standard motorcars.

Magnesium and aluminum alloys will be used in constructing the car, which has been named Le Sabre. It will be powered with an experimental V-8 engine, with 10-to-1 compression ratio plus a supercharger. It will have a dual fuel system to permit injection of enriched fuel at certain speed levels. The engine will develop more than 300 horsepower with supercharger.

There will be a special torque converter of the type used in GM's Buick line.

Le Sabre will weigh around 3000 pounds, the weight being held down by use of heat-treated magnesium and aluminum alloys.

The experimental car, a two seater, brings to mind the sweeping lines of a jet aircraft. The body is only 36¼ inches high at the cowl and 50 inches high with the convertible top raised. Wheelbase is 115 inches but overall length is 200 inches. Despite the low profile the car's ground clearance is six inches.

Most of the car's almost fantastic appearance comes from the long simulated jet-type tail cone with long rear fenders that have twin tail fins. In the tail cone is centered a "spinner" or bomb-shape hub that serves as a rear bumper.

The twin tail fins house aircraft type 20-gallon rubberized fuel cells. One is used for gasoline and the other for methol alcohol. They are similar to fuel tanks in aircraft wings.

Beside the usual assortment of gauges and dials there are a tachometer, compass and altimeter, indicators to register engine oil temperature and pressure and a control to operate hydraulic jacks in each of the car's wheels.

These permit the drive to jack up the car without leaving his seat.

The car has electric seat warmers, an electrically operated seat adjusting screw-jack and electrically operated convertible top.

If the car is parked with top down, rain falling on a sensitized spot between the seats actuates the top-raising mechanism and raises the windows automatically.

Earl says it was designed "to find out whether some of our futuristic ideas would pay off on the road."

Boy, 2, Recovering From Aspirin Feast

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 28 (AP).—Two-year-old Jimmy Gray ate "60 or 70" aspirin tablets, but doctors say he will be all right.

Young Jimmy was found yesterday on the kitchen sink with an almost empty 100-tablet bottle, eating the tablets like they were peppermint.

He underwent stomach pumping for more than an hour and doctors told the family today the boy would be all right but would be unable to go home from the hospital for a day or two.

Temporary Carriers 'Tire' of Delivering Mail

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (NYHT.) Two temporary letter carriers, weary of their burdens of Christmas mail, delivered them respectively into an incinerator and into a snow bank, Postoffice inspectors charged today.

Arrested on charges of destroying mail, both offered the same explanation: "I was tired of delivering mail."

Protected every step of the way and so is the milk she drinks!

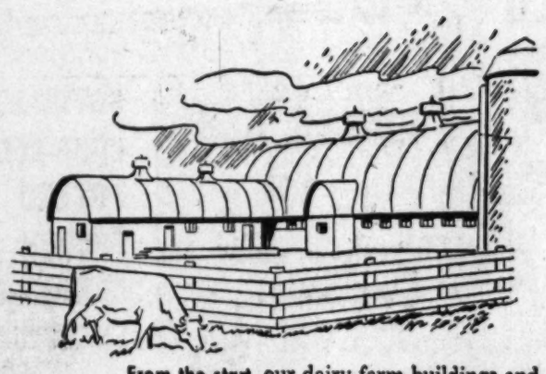
Yes, each step is important . . . and because we, too, recognize our responsibility to protect Washington's milk supply every step of the way, from the dairy farm to the consumer . . . we maintain standards of cleanliness, efficiency and production that result in the highest quality milk produced anywhere in the entire United States . . . at no additional cost to the consumer!



From the start, our dairy-farm buildings and surroundings are planned and constructed to give the maximum protection and cleanliness, and encourage the highest degree of efficiency.

Protection begins outside our barns, where fifty-foot concrete walks, covered with lime, prevent the soil from being carried into the barn.

An all-important protective measure is accomplished by our modern surface coolers. These coolers reduce the milk's temperature to below fifty degrees in a matter of a few seconds . . . thereby preventing the growth of bacteria.

Regular inspections by local health department authorities add final protection . . . and there is additional significance in the fact that milk from our dairy farms is rated higher nationally than milk from any other area of the country.

Price Controls Await Future, Truman Says

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

General price controls are still some distance in the future, President Truman indicated yesterday, although Government experts are hard at work on the program.

The President's observation, made at his regular news conference, was in response to a reporter's question. The reporter called attention to the provision in the control law under which no ceilings can be placed on farm prices unless they have risen above parity or above the pre-Korea level, whichever is higher. The reporter remarked that some people were wondering if the price of butter would be permitted to soar while Cadillacs were rolled back.

Mr. Truman said he hadn't read the law carefully when he signed it. Then he quickly added that he had someone else do that for him.

The President said he would present his annual State of the Union Message to Congress in person soon after the next session convenes January 3. He added that he would deliver his message January 8 if he could get it ready by then.

As for new tax legislation, Mr. Truman said a request for additional taxes would be presented to Congress as soon as it can be prepared. Such a program, he explained, takes time to work out, which is being done now by Treasury committees.

Possible New Levies

A Treasury official said Wednesday that a tax program would be submitted within a few weeks after the Eighty-second Congress goes to work. There have been indications that Congress might be asked for new excise taxes and perhaps a national sales tax in addition to higher personal and corporation income levies.

In reply to another question, the President said he had no plans to seek to substitute a single administrator for the present five-man Reconstruction Finance Corporation Board. He said he had submitted a reorganization plan but it had been turned down.

He has not changed his position on universal military training, Mr. Truman said, and added that he had asked for universal training as he termed it, seven or eight times. But he would not indicate whether he favored present Defnse Department and Selective Service efforts to take notice specifically of what they have said is a present need for service rather than training.

In answer to a question, the President merely said an emergency like the present one couldn't be run with two sets of training programs when you have men enough for only one.

Attitude Toward Spain

In connection with his appointment of Stanton Griffis to be Ambassador to Spain, Mr. Truman said his own attitude toward Spain hadn't changed. But, he added, an exchange of Ambassadors made for a more orderly way of doing business between the two countries.

Asked about a report from Tokyo that Chiang Kai-shek's forces were poised to invade the Chinese mainland from Formosa when they are given the word, the President declined to comment at this time.

Mr. Truman was asked what he thought of a recent letter by Senator Byrd (D., Va.) suggesting economies in nondefense spending.

Smiling, the President said he hadn't read all the letter because he doesn't think Byrd knows very much about the Federal budget. He said there was one sentence in the letter saying Byrd would support the President. Mr. Truman said he had written Byrd telling him he was glad to hear it.

Slum Clearance Agency to Meet With New Director

The District Redevelopment Land Agency today will meet for the first time with its new executive director, John R. Searles, jr., to discuss operating procedures.

Congress created the slum clearance agency five years ago, but has never given it any money. Last fall, however, the agency took advantage of the 1949 housing act and obtained an initial loan of $170,000 from the Housing and Home Finance Agency. It then hired Searles as the first paid staff member.

At today's 2 p. m. meeting in the District Building, the agency is scheduled to draw up bylaws and discuss such questions as how these first funds are to be handled and who will sign the checks.

Truman Plans Cruise To Work on Message

President Truman will board the yacht Williamsburg this afternoon for a weekend work-and-rest-cruise on the Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay.

White House Press Secretary Joseph Short said Mr. Truman will be accompanied by a number of staff aides who will help him prepare his annual State of the Union message, due for delivery to the new Congress soon after it convenes January 3.

The time of his return has not been decided.

Something's There

Scone Stone May Be Sunk In Park Pond

LONDON, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—Scotland Yard "amphibious experts" found a heavy object in the serpentine pond in London's Hyde Park tonight and hoped it might be the ancient Stone of Scone, which was stolen from under the coronation chair in Westminster Abbey Christmas morning.

Detectives in boats and high wading boots dragged the 50-acre pond this evening under the glare of searchlights after a scratch had been found on the bridge—a scratch which might have been left by a big stone being dragged across the bridge.

The draggers got chains and ropes around the object in the pond several times. Each time the chains and ropes broke, and operations were suspended until daybreak Friday.

Earlier in the day police vainly dragged the little Crouch River east of London for the stone.

The two operations were eloquent testimony of the complete lack of real clews. The Crouch sear .h was started after the Yard received a tip that a heavy object had been dumped into it.

Police believe that the Stone of Scone, which was brought to London from Scotland by King Edward I in 1296 or 1297, was "liberated" by Scots nationalists who claim it for their country.

Reorganizing Of Munitions Board Begun

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Munitions Board, which has been under congressional attack, is being reorganized both as to setup and key staff personnel.

A major aim is to provide greater civilian direction of the Pentagon agency, which long has been run by its military directorate.

Newly appointed Chairman J. D. Small, who is revamping the often criticized board, could not be reached for comment but other officials acknowledged there have been some staff changes and that it is hoped to bring some qualified leaders from industry into the organization.

Maj. Gen. Francis H. Griswold, now assistant deputy chief of staff of the Air Force for materiel will become director of the Munitions Board staff. He replaces Maj. Gen. P. W. Timberlake, who takes over Griswold's job on the air staff. Officials noted that Timberlake has been with the board for four years and has been overdue for reassignment.

His chief assistant, Brig. Gen. E. C. Langmead, also has been transferred back to the Air Force and is being given command of the San Bernardino, Calif., materiel area. His post has not been filled.

Rear Adm. M. L. Ring, director of supply management, will remain, it is understood, as will the newly assigned acting director of production management, Maj. Gen. J. V. Matejka of the Army.

Reliable Pentagon sources indicated the shift in control to civilian hands probably will come in placing men from industry in newly created posts. It was pointed out that the big new military procurement program and partial mobilization will require more higher level civilians with such experience than has been the case in the past.

However, the board has been sharply attacked in recent reports of Senator Lyndon Johnson's Senate Preparedness Subcommittee for "lack of foresight" and having a "siesta psychology." The board was particularly blamed for failure to carry forward the stockpiling program vigorously before the war situation skyrocketed prices and created acute shortages.

No change is expected in the actual membership of the Munitions Board itself. Vice Chairman Roscoe Seybold, a Westinghouse Electric executive, and a newcomer, is the only other full-time member besides Small. The others are: Undersecretary of the Army Archibald S. Alexander, Assistant Navy Secretary John T. Koehler and Assistant Air Force Secretary Eugene M. Zuckert.

Hoover Called Isolationist

ans to fight back at Hoover's ideas.

But John Foster Dulles, the Republican consultant to the State Department, showed yesterday that he was just as reluctant to engage in a direct debate with the former leader of his party.

Dulles was upset yesterday when some newspapers reported the State Department as having announced that he would "answer" Hoover in a radio speech tonight.

He promptly drafted an apologetic telegram to Hoover and asked Michael J. McDermott, the State Department's press officer, to release it. After expressing regret at the way newspapers had "featured" his speech tonight, the telegram said:

"The point of view I shall express may be somewhat different from yours, but I agree with much that you said and I hope and expect that you will agree with much that I say.

"I think it is very healthy to have a great national debate upon the grave issues of our time."

Later President Truman told his press conference that he didn't know about Dulles' telegram to Hoover. Asked whether he was "aware in a general way" of what Dulles would say on the radio, the President said no, he hadn't talked with Dulles.

The speech will be delivered in New York before the American Association for the United Nations, and will be broadcast from 8 to 8:30 tonight over the Mutual stations.

Kaiser-Frazer Plans Anger Plane Builders

Pentagon plans to bring Kaiser-Frazer and other auto manufacturers into warplane production has large sections of the aircraft industry up in arms.

An Air Force decision to let Kaiser build Fairchild C-119 Packets—now made exclusively at Hagerstown, Md.—at the Government's Willow Run (Mich.) plant has resulted in hurried conferences of top plane builders and critical editorials in the aviation trade press.

Some of the criticism now being privately expressed of the deal is expected to be publicly aired on Capitol Hill when Congress returns next week. Fairchild officials, while reluctant to comment, were said to be ired at the way it was handled.

Negotiations were well underway with the Air Force for Fairchild to expand production of the "flying boxcars" by reopening the Government-owned Douglas bomber plant in Chicago. Then suddenly, aircraft officials said, the job was switched to Kaiser. Henry Kaiser and his son, they claimed, suddenly appeared at the Hagerstown plant seeking data on how to build the Packets.

The trade paper Aviation Week sharply criticized the switch from an experienced aircraft company to these "babes in the aircraft woods" and predicted that Kaiser costs would be much higher. The editorial declared that the decision to give the automobile builder the business followed close on the heels of the grant of a 25-million-dollar RFC loan to Kaiser-Frazer and implied that the aircraft order was part of the loan arrangement.

An Air Force spokesman said the decision to have Kaiser-Frazer build Packets in the Willow Run plant it now leases for car building was in accordance with recent Department of Defense orders to "broaden the base" of defense production.

Sen. Butler Query Planned

that he is not preparing a formal motion, or planning to make one, for contesting Butler's admission. But Senate aides pointed out that it would take the motion of only one Senator on January 3 to throw the question of Butler's admission into debate for a decision by majority vote.

The motion could be to have Butler "stand aside" while other new Senators are sworn in, or to refer his credentials to the Senate Rules Committee, of which the elections subcommittee is a part.

Anderson, who was acting national Democratic chairman during the fall campaign, told reporters he feels that "in times like this we are entitled to something better than picture-faking in a campaign."

This was a reference to the composite picture showing Tydings and Earl Browder, Communist leader. It was circulated for Butler in a tabloid "From the Record." It was included in the material investigated by the Gillette committee.

Anderson said, "Good Republicans as well as Democrats should question such tactics. If you can associate a candidate with a Communist by picture faking you can associate him with a lot of other things."

He said he is far more interested in establishing some rules for the future than in the question of Butler's seating. He said he felt the Democrats could not afford to let the questions raised by the Butler campaign literature pass without notice.

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) said he agreed that the matter should not be ignored, and that the question of legislation to deal with similar situations should be considered.

Fedder, the Baltimore printer, said he gave his story to the Gillette investigators last week, and he went over it again with reporters in his print shop office Wednesday night. He said he is 40, a native of Russia, brought to Baltimore when he was 3, and that his father for many years was sexton for a Jewish congregation in Baltimore. He is married and has two sons, 12 and 19.

The Fedder story was first outlined by Columnist Drew Pearson in his broadcast Sunday night.

Fedder said that between October 15 and the election he got several political printing jobs from the Butler organization, plus other mailing and distribution work that ran to a total bill of $18,099.59.

Fedder said that one of the assignments he carried out for Butler headquarters was to pick up 500,000 copies of the "From the Record" tabloid at the Washington Times-Herald, where it was printed. He said he took them to Baltimore and stored them for several days.

He said part of his assignment was to see to the house-to-house distribution of the tabloid in Baltimore and other Maryland cities, and to mail them to all postoffice and rural route box holders in the State.

At the start of the week before election, he said, "Butler's whole campaign was sitting in my shop." This referred to several batches of undelivered campaign literature, and the "From the Record" tabloid.

He said he received visits early in the week from Dan Sourine, who he later learned was investigator for Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) and Miss Jean Kerr, who he later learned was McCarthy's administrative assistant. Each brought a batch of single-sheet blue printed inserts about Butler's life story to go with the tabloid, Fedder said.

He said he showed Miss Kerr the printing and tabloid material.

He said they told her they wouldn't move until he was paid. He said the bill at the time was up to $10,000 of which $5703.32 was for the tabloid distribution.

He reported Miss Kerr said she would have some money for him the next morning.

He said in the early morning of November 2, about 2:30 a. m. Butler called him in answer to a message he had left. He said he told Butler "your entire campaign is lying in my shop" and that nothing would move until he was paid.

He said he met Butler later that day at the candidate's headquarters and got a check for $1000. He said later in the day Miss Kerr brought $2400 in checks and $20 in cash (he said the checks included a $1000 check from Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee).

Also during the afternoon, he said, he received a letter from Butler. Fedder's attorney, Marvin Braiterman, quoted the key paragraph of this letter as reading:

"At this time I want to give you my personal assurance that I do guarantee payment for any of your services that have not been paid for at the time the campaign is ended. This assurance applies to materials that have been delivered and to materials that were not shipped in time for use in the campaign."

With the letter and the $3420 he had received, Fedder said he let go the first batch of the tabloid mailing. He said there was also a promise of a check for $5000 more the next morning. He said the check arrived Friday, November 3. He said it was signed by Ruth McCormick Miller, editor of the Times-Herald. He said it was made out to Butler and indorsed by him to Fedder's firm. When the check came, he said, he let the rest of the mailing of the tabloid go out and released all the printing.

There were two later payments to him, he said, totaling about $1800 and they paid his bill in full.

But meanwhile, he said, the Butler letter came into later events. He said that on Saturday, November 4, he was called on the phone by Ray Kiermas of McCarthy's office staff in Washington.

McCarthy's office said yesterday the Senator was out of town and could not be reached by phone, that Sourine also could not be reached, that Miss Kerr was in Honolulu in a hospital, and that only Kiermas was available. Kiermas, however, said he did not recall any dealings with Fedder and had nothing to do with the Butler campaign.

Fedder said the caller wanted him to do a rush job of having 50,000 postcards handwritten and addressed. He said he undertook to do 25,000 or 30,000 and came to Washington to pick up the cards and stamps. He said he met Sourine and Kiermas at a door of the Senate Office Building and was given 50,000 postcards, 50,000 stamps and $50 cash.

Fedder said he distributed the work to a number of women to do at home. He said the work went slower than expected. Upshot, he said, was that 11,000 were done and 39,000 returned.

Fedder told reporters the transaction wound up with him being ridden in a car driven by Sourine, with Sourine and two other men from around 1 a. m. November 6 to around 5:30 or 6 a. m. He said Sourine demanded of him the Butler letter of guarantee.

Fedder said he told them he couldn't give them the letter because his lawyer had it.

"I know what a smear campaign can do and with me being born in Russia it scared me more than the average guy."

Fedder said he kept asking to go home. He said a stop was made at his home and he went in alone and got a $500 advance payment check, brought it out to the three men, and that then the ride continued. He said they stopped at a drive-in restaurant and Sourine and the other two men ordered milk shakes and "I got a cup of coffee." At the restaurant, Fedder said, one of the men started writing a police-type confession. Fedder said he signed two pages before the ride ended.

He said he didn't know what was in it, but "they tried to make it look like I was stealing, cheating, billing for mailing stuff I had not mailed" even though Butler had been given postoffice receipts for what was mailed.

He said the next evening he met one of the men with whom he rode and was given a $115 check to cover the balance of the charge for the 11,000 postcards.

Fedder said he sustained no violence, but at one point was shoved into the car. He said he did not call police from his home because he considered he was engaged in a business transaction.

He said he tried to reach Butler later to tell him about the ride, but did not reach him.

After all his trouble, Fedder said, "I voted for Mr. Butler so I wouldn't have to lie in case he asked me how I voted."

World Bank Lends Colombia 2 Millions

The World Bank yesterday granted a $2,600,000 loan to help complete a water-power project in Colombia.

The loan is the third that the 48-nation bank has made to Colombia for development purposes. It raises to $232,775,000 the funds the bank has advanced to member countries in Latin America.

The new credit is to lower cost of materials and services obtained outside Colombia to finish a La Insula hydroelectric project near Manizales, a city of 130,000 population situated in western Colombia in the center of a major coffee-growing area.

The loan is to a publicly-owned power company, Central Hydroelectric de Caldas, Limitada. The Colombian government guarantees repayment.

It will run for 20 years with the interest of 4 percent, including a 1 percent commission for the bank's special reserve fund. Payments to retire the loan will start August 15, 1952.

All Female

New Hybrid Corn Lacks Male Touch

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Agricultural scientists in three widely separated sections of the country have come up with new types of hybrid corn that are entirely female.

If any of the three groups are successful in developing their new types on a large scale, the result will be:

1. Tremendous labor-saving during the tasseling season. At present the hybrid seed companies employ thousands of workers during the de-tasseling season to remove the tassel, or male portion, of the corn plant. Corn growers say the cost of de-tasseling varies from $20 to $35 an acre—an important element in the cost of the hybrid seed.

2. Hybrids produced by the male sterile method will produce purer hybrid strains, because at present workers miss many of the tassels. Scientists also predict that the result will be more vigorous, higher-yielding plants.

Developed Independently

According to Dr. Merle T. Jenkins, corn expert at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, the three methods have been developed independently and almost simultaneously in Connecticut, Texas and Illinois. The New England plant was developed by Dr. Donald F. Jones, geneticist at the Connecticut Experiment Station, who originally discovered the double cross that produced hybrid corn. Jones has been working on male sterile corn for nearly 30 years.

The Illinois type was worked out by Dr. M. M. Rhoades at Illinois University, who has been on the job for 20 years since he accidentally discovered some corn plants that produced tassels but no pollen. These types were brought to this country from South America.

Rogers in Texas

The Texas type was the result of long years of work by a group headed by Dr. John Rogers.

All three types "behave differently," according to Dr. Jenkins and all are still "decidedly in the experimental stage." Each, he said, has a "different genetic setup."

Corn is what is known as a monoclinous or bi-sexual plant, with one plant being both male and female. Male sterile types have been developed in other plants, partciularly onions, in which they are now in wide production.

Britons to Get Quarter of Meat Ration in Mutton

LONDON, Dec. 28 (AP).—Beef-loving Britons will get one-quarter of their skimpy meat ration in mutton next week, the Ministry of Food announced tonight.

The weekly ration will be cut to 10 pence (about 12 cents) worth of fresh meat per person on Monday. Britons are now getting one shilling and two pence (16 cents) worth of fresh meat weekly.

Twenty percent of the new ration will be ewe mutton and 5 percent will be wether mutton, a Food Ministry spokesman said.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin met with Argentine Ambassador Carlos Hogan today to discuss a new Argentine proposal for resuming South American meat shipments to this country.

Hogan described the Argentine offer as an "alternative proposal" to end the trade deadlock. Argentina suspended meat exports to Britain last July after the British refused to pay higher prices.

Man Admits Killing Ex-Follies Girl, Police Say

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (AP).—A burly New York State apple-picker admitted today, police said, that he garrotted former Follies beauty Evelyn (Yvonne) Hughes during a beer-drinking party in his hotel room.

Police quoted 41-year-old Birger Nordkvist as admitting that he strangled the 50-year-old former actress in a rage after she rebuffed his advances.

"I'm sorry for everything I did," they quoted him as saying.

The body of the one-time showgirl and movie actress was found Tuesday at the Hotel Ashland. She had been throttled with a handkerchief. A flowered silk scarf had been stuffed into her mouth.

Woodrow Wilson Award to Truman For His U. N. Work

President Truman will receive the Woodrow Wilson Foundation's award "in recognition of his wisdom, courage and leadership in strengthening the United Nations as an effective instrument of world law," it was announced yesterday.

He will be the first Chief Executive to win the honor, inaugurated 25 years ago in memory of the World War I Democratic President.

Mr. Truman was notified yesterday—ninety-fourth anniversary of Wilson's birth—by Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, daughter of the late President, Louis D. Brownlow and Arthur Sweetster. They are members of the board of directors of the Wilson Foundation and Sweetser is head of the U. N. office here.

The presentation ceremony will be held at the White House January 10.

Bids for Maryland Part Of Highway Due Jan. 9

BALTIMORE, Dec. 28 (AP).—Bids for building the last section of the Maryland portion of the Baltimore-Washington expressway are to be opened January 9, the State Roads Commission announced today.

The last 1.94-mile stretch is between the interchanges at Dorsey road and Jessup road. The Federal Government is supposed to build from there on.

The Gallup Poll

Voters for U. S. Acceptance If U. N. Votes Peiping a Seat

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 28.—If a majority of United Nations members vote to admit Red China to membership in return for a cease-fire order in Korea, the United States should go along with that decision, in the opinion of the American public.

This is shown in interviews with a cross-section of voters in a Nation-wide study by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Although in previous surveys the issue of giving Red China a seat in the Security Council has always been opposed by a majority of voters interviewed, this survey shows that more than half of the American public would accept the judgment of the United Nations.

In short, if the United Nations decides to recognize Red China, a majority of the people in this country are likely to overlook their own objections to this.

The question was put to a carefully constructed cross-section of voters in the following fashion:

"Suppose a majority of the members of the United Nations decides to give Communist China a seat on the U. N. Security Council if the Chinese agree to stop fighting in Korea. Do you think the United States should go along with this U. N. decision, or not?"

The vote:

Yes	57%
No	28
No opinion	15
	100%

At present the Nationalist Chinese government of Chiang Kai-shek has a Security Council seat, and this delegate would have to be deposed to admit Red China.

Last July, many months before Red Chinese armies entered the Korean war and thereby raised the threat of a major Asian conflict, an Institute survey found only 11 percent of Americans willing to see Red China admitted to the U. N., while 58 percent were opposed and 31 percent undecided.

The argument has been advanced in some quarters that to admit Red China to the U. N. now would be to reward her aggression against the U. N. forces in Korea; in other words, that Red China would, in effect, be "shooting" her way into membership.

Those voters who have had the most education are the most in favor of giving Red China a seat if the United Nations decides this is the best course to follow.

Here is the vote by education level:

	College	High Sch'l	Grade Sch'l
Yes	67%	58%	53%
No	28	29	26
No opinion	5	13	21
	100%	100%	100%

East, West Germany Honor Cardinal at Funeral Rites

BERLIN, Dec. 28 (NYHT).—East and west Germany joined today in funeral rites honoring the head of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Berlin who died here a week ago.

Konrad Cardinal Von Preysing was laid to rest in the St. Hedwig Cemetery in the Soviet sector of Berlin after religious and political leaders from both parts of Germany had attended a funeral ceremony at St. Sebastian's church in the French sector of the city.

The Church and the cemetery are only two city blocks apart but are separated by the sector boundary.

Although he was regarded as a strong foe of communism, Cardinal Von Preysing was given full honors in death by leaders of the East German Communist government.

A wreath was laid on the coffin on behalf of American High Commissioner John J. McCloy.

The requiem was celebrated by Josef Cardinal Frings of Cologne, in the the presence of two archbishops and eight bishops from East and West Germany.

Bill on Training Rights For Korea Vets Signed

President Truman signed a bill yesterday granting disabled veterans of the Korean war the same employment training rights and benefits enjoyed by World War II veterans.

He also signed a measure making Korean war veterans eligible for membership in the American Legion and Amvets.

Benefits under the vocational training bill would vary according to the degree of disability and the time required to put the veteran in shape to hold down a civilian job.

Traffic 'Trap' Is Inspired By Beaten Path

To heck with a better mouse trap. Here's a man who's had to build an automobile trap—or a reasonable facsimilie thereof—to keep people from beating a path to and through his door.

Burr

His trap bears some resemblance to a road block. Designed to encourage vehicles to keep to the road, it's constructed of stout logs and, he says, is "something substantial enough, to keep the traffic out of my living room."

The intrepid trapper is D. M. Burr, chief aviation machinists mate, of Fleet Air Service Squadron 103, based at the Naval Air Station, Patuxent, Md.

Burr was more than mildly provoked last October 1 when a 1950 Ford left Highway No. 246 near his house, struck a log, hurtled through the air and went through his front wall, living room and outside wall of his bedroom. The car did miss the bed in which Burr and his wife were sleeping at the time. But it caused about $2000 damage to the house and about $500 to the furniture.

Burr resolutely rebuilt his picket fence and made repairs to the house. 'Twas only a Saturday later that another car left the highway at about the same place, plowed through the rebuilt fence, and crashed into a tree in the Burr yard.

This was too much for Burr. He thought the county highway department should do something about all this unscheduled traffic—but other things were at stake besides departments.

A week later, he and a laborer built a complicated barrier which so far has fended off fenders and bumpers of passing vehicles. Burr, however, still expects to find cars on his lawn at any time

The whole trouble, he states, is that Highway No. 246 is marked for a 40-mile-per-hour speed, which, he suspects, is not invariably observed. There is a curve in front of his house, a curve which once was marked by traffic reflectors. These reflectors, he said, were replaced after two accidents, but need replacing again.

Burr says he has tried to find other housing in the area, but because of the local housing situation, has thus far been confined to his present armor-plate quarters.

Modernized Chamber Prepared for House

The House voted yesterday to return to its modernized chamber in the Capitol for an historic session next Monday.

Since last summer the House has been meeting in the New House Office Building while workmen remodeled the Capitol chamber.

Congressional veterans said Monday's session will be the first New Year's Day meeting of the House in modern days if not in all congressional history. The Senate won't meet Monday but has a Tuesday session scheduled.

Sergeant Furloughed To Open Legislature

BISMARCK, N. Dak., Dec. 28 (U.P.).—Air Force Sergt. George Olson has been granted a furlough to call to order the North Dakota House of Representatives when it convenes January 2.

He was the clerk of the 1949 session, and the law states he must call the 1951 session to order.

3 Convicted Of Charges On Morals

Three men were convicted of morals charges by Judge Andrew J. Howard, jr., yesterday in Municipal Court and fined $25 each.

Benjamin C. Mehaffey, 23, of 1754 Massachusetts ave. nw., an art student, pleaded guilty to soliciting an undercover man for a lewd and immoral purpose. The court was told that Mehaffey is taking psychiatric treatment.

Irving Louis Meisler, 23, of New York City, a student, also pleaded guilty to a soliciting charge.

Clarence A. Fousnought, 32, of 440 Bellevue dr., Falls Church, a clothing salesman, was found guilty of assaulting an undercoverman in an indescent manner.

Motions on Suit Aimed at Bonds Will Be Argued

Fairfax County Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown will hear arguments at 10 a. m. today on two separate motions filed by county attorneys seeking to dismiss a suit brought by Paul E. Rhinehart, jr., who hopes to invalidate $11,480,000 in public bonds.

The motions, filed on behalf of the county board of supervisors and school board, ask dismissal of Rhinehart's suit on the allegation that it was filed after the deadline for legal action to nullify the bonds. Rinehart, in his suit, has asked the court to invalidate a $10,500,000 bond issue for emergency school construction and a $980,000 issue for construction of a courthouse addition.

Even if the court upholds the county's motions for dismissal of the suit, Rhinehart will have the privilege of appealing the lower court's ruling to the Virginia Supreme Court, according to attorneys for the county. Until the case is finally disposed of, the county is powerless to sell the bonds, which were approved in a public referendum last May.

Awards, provided by several local dealers who also are providing the track and transformers, will be made to the winners in each of the four divisions.

Canada's Gold Miners Ask World Price Hike

OTTAWA, Dec. 28 (AP).—Canada's multimillion-dollar gold mining industry, hit by rising production costs, today urged the government to join with South Africa in seeking a higher world price for gold.

A delegation of the precious-metal industry, meeting with Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent and a cabinet committee, also urged the government to broaden its program of financial aid to the industry.

Court Clerks Finally Solve Contest Puzzle

District Court's big puzzle contest is over.

The big puzzle was whether the clerks of District Court would ever complete the grinding task of mailing out 49,797 checks totaling $51,249 to entrants in a puzzle contest.

They finally did it. It took two years.

The court has been steadily disbursing the money ever since the Supreme Court in 1948 upheld a fraud order of postal authorities against sponsors of the 1945 "Hall of Fame" contest in Facts magazine.

During the litigation, the contest entrance money was impounded by the court. Once the case was decided against the sponsors, the money had to be returned to the persons paying it.

The checks ranged from 15 cents to $3.

According to financial clerk Marion E. Lewis, about one-fourth of the checks have been returned because the persons had moved.

7 Leave Tampa To Avoid Crime Probe Summons

TAMPA, Fla., Dec. 28 (U.P.).—The Senate Crime Investigating Committee announced tonight that seven members of Tampa's gambling syndicate had skipped town in advance of the committee's public hearings which open Friday.

Sen. Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), who will head the committee's probe here, reported that United States marshals had been unable to serve summons on Salvatore (Red) Italiano, the Santos Traffi-cantes sr. and jr., Gus Friscia, and Anthony, Frank and Thomas Deciedue.

All were named by the widow of slain Gambler Jimmy Velasco along with Primo Lazzara as members of a syndicate which controlled the numbers racket in Tampa and as "enemies" of Velasco.

Velasco, a gambling racketeer and political "fixer," was shot down in December 1948. His assassination and 17 others like it since 1931 remain unsolved.

Brotherhood Week Plans Are Made At Meeting Here

Plans for the observance of "Brotherhood Week" in the District of Columbia got under way yesterday, when J. Howard McGrath, United States Attorney General and chairman of the local group, met with his committee.

"Brotherhood Week," which is sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, will be observed February 18-25.

The annual dinner for "Brotherhood Week" will be held at the Mayflower Hotel February 27. Former Prime Minister of France Paul Renaud will be principal speaker.

The meeting sponsored by the women's committee will be held on February 20. Further details on it will be announced later. Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, who is an honorary cochairman for "Brotherhood Week," will preside.

Shipyard Picketing Ended by Court Order

Superior Judge Henry Clay Agnew issued a temporary order yesterday to restrain the International Association of Machinists (independent) from picketing the yards.

Teamsters Ban Association With Reds

The Teamsters Joint Council which includes eight AFL teamsters' locals with 8000 members here, yesterday voted to ban teamster representation in any labor group which permitted the seating of Communists or former Communists as delegates.

A similar resolution has been adopted by Local No. 4, AFL Bricklayers.

Both actions are specifically aimed at three officials of Local 74, AFL Building Labors—Henry Thomas, president, Tom Sampler, secretary-treasurer, and William Gray, business agent—who recently testified before the House Committee on Un-American Activities that they were former Communists, and had captured leadership of their local as a Communist objective.

As a result of the hearings, the AFL Building Trades Council here has expelled Thomas as a delegate and the Construction Contractors Council has asked that he be removed as a trustee of the building laborers welfare fund.

The International Laborers' Union has ordered Local 74 placed under a "superviser" who is to eliminate all Communist influences from the local.

New Groups In Security Act

ning to participate. Each institution found an overwhelming sentiment in favor of the Social Security protection. Howard University is polling its employes.

At George Washington, the program will include employes of the University Hospital as well, except for internes, who are not eligible. The University of Maryland has a State retirement plan and therefore is not eligible.

Under the nonprofit organization program, the cost of Social Security insurance would be shared jointly, with 1½ percent of employe wages withheld and another 1½ percent paid by the institutions.

Social Security authorities have emphasized that the protection is not automatically extended to employes of the nonprofit groups, but involves these steps:

1. The employing organization files a certificate with the Bureau of Internal Revenue in which it elects to assume its share of the Social Security tax if at least two-thirds of the employes wish Social Security coverage.

2. Employes then are asked to indicate, by signing a certificate, whether they want Social Security coverage.

If the minimum number sign up, arrangements may be made for coverage for an initial period of at least eight years. In addition, two years' advance notice must be given before coverage can be terminated, thus the minimum period becomes 10 years.

Here are some typical questions:

Q. If my organization arranges for coverage and I have not signed up, must I pay Social Security taxes?

A. No. The coverage will apply only to those who signed up, plus all new employes after coverage begins.

Q. If my organization decides to terminate coverage, may I continue under Social Security while employed here?

A. No. Your coverage would be ended and your payments held in case you should later work in a field covered by Social Security.

Q. Must every member of a nonprofit organization covered obtain a Social Security card?

A. Yes. Applications are available at any post office, or the field offices of the Social Security Administration, 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw., or 815 King st., Alexandria, Va.

SATURDAY — How servicemen are helped; improved benefits.

Coverage Is Required For Many Groups

The extended Social Security program makes coverage mandatory for:

1. Employes of such nonprofit organizations as veterans' groups, labor organizations, civic and recreational associations, if the employes receive $50 or more in a calendar quarter. Previously, such workers were eligible if they earned $45 or more in a quarter.

2. Employes and self-employed in the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico on the same basis as in the United States.

3. Americans employed outside the United States by an American employer, and employes on American aircraft outside the United States.

Esquire Calendars Banned by Rome Court

ROME, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—A Rome court ruled today that the 1951 Esquire calendar girls were "obscene and an offense against the public."

Jack L. Begon, publisher of the Rome Daily American, was found guilty on the charge of distributing the calendars, but the court suepended sentence after confiscating 5000 of the calendars worth four million lire ($6153).

Begon, whose publishing company distributes American magazines in Italy, appealed the verdict.

Only Real Diamonds Squeak, Physicist Says

LONDON, Dec. 28 (U.P.).—Physics expert Dr. Mary Waller said today that unless a diamond can squeak like a mouse it isn't real.

Touch a diamond gently with a piece of dry ice, she said, and if it squeaks it's genuine. She explained that diamond is a conductor and glass is not. The diamond, conducting heat to the dry ice, causes carbon dioxide to be freed and set up squeak-vibrations, she said.

Communists in U. S. Greeted by Moscow

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (AP).—The United States Communist party's fifteenth annual convention started behind closed doors today with a kiss from Moscow.

From behind their own little Iron Curtain, the Reds released a press statement which carried the following message from the Soviet Communist party.

"We wish the Communist party of the United States of America success in its struggle against reaction, for the vital interests and rights of the working class and all American toilers, for the ideological strengthening of the party ranks, for lasting peace between the peoples . . .

"Long live friendship between the peoples of the United States and of the Soviet Union."

Convention sessions, lasting through Saturday, were closed to press and public. They were held at Stuyvesant Casino, Second ave. and Ninth st.

The party said it will summarize highlights of the meetings in press releases each day.

In other years the party has convened openly in such arenas as Madison Square Garden.

Besides the message from Moscow, today's press release said one also had been received from Communist China.

The statement added that National Organizational Secretary Henry Winston set the keynote for the convention — "the struggle to prevent a third world war."

The main political report came from National Secretary Gus Hall. The statement did not say whether he went into the decline of Communist strength in this country.

"Hall devoted a major section of his report to the growth of peace sentiment in this country . . .," the statement said in part.

Winston and Hall are among the 11 Communist leaders convicted of plotting to advocate the violent overthrow of the United States Government. They are appealing jail sentences.

The statement spoke of applause by delegates for the names of National Chairman William Z. Foster and General Secretary Eugene Dennis. It said Foster was absent because of ill health. Dennis is serving a jail term for contempt of Congress.

A new national committee is scheduled to be elected Saturday night. The statement did not indicate if any or all of the convicted leaders would seek reelection.

Postlude

3 Concerts Given for Music Group

By Paul Hume

Last night's three concerts arranged for the delegates to the Music Teachers' National Association were evenly divided between the ladies and the men.

Claire Coci, organist, and Ray Lev, pianist, played in Washington Cathedral and the Phillips Gallery respectively, and Zino Francescatti and Robert Casadesus gave three Beethoven violin and piano sonatas in the Library of Congress.

Electing to listen to the distaff artists, I started at the Cathedral and wound up in the the gallery. The situations in the two places were rather dissimilar. Miss Coci is one of the nation's leading organists.

Any organist takes certain risks in planning a recital in a large church in winter's colder weeks. The nature of the tempormental instruments is such that they cannot be kept in tune at such times, and are prone to develop other mechanical troubles. Miss Coci had more than her share of these.

Yet we doubt that her recital would have been greatly improved even had the organ been in its best estate. For Miss Coci prefers the superficial glitter and brilliance that the great organ of today makes possible, to any penetrating musicality. Her approach to the Passacaglia and Fugue of Bach was highly romantic. This is a legitimate approach, but distended ritards and constant shifting of colors are out of character with the music.

Miss Coci did a splendid job of keeping the tempo strict in the Bach fugue, and that is a real accomplishment. But that was something of an isolated virtue in a reading marked principally by personalized adornments. The brazen use of the great tuba on the final chords topped the whole exhibition of poor taste.

Two preludes by Brahms suffered from slow tempi, and Dupre's Fileuse met with catastrophe almost from the start. Memory lapses and defective rhythm spoiled the delicacy of Dupre's flashing inspiration. Nor did his Variations on a Noel fare better.

Meanwhile at the Phillips Gallery, Miss Lev presented the four fantasies for piano by Bach (the Chromastic, with fugue), Beethoven (Sonata Opus 14, No. 2), Chopin (F Minor), and Schumann.

Hearing only her Schumann, we wished we might have heard the entire recital. While Miss Lev sometimes bears down on the piano with more power than even a modern concert grand can handle, she has the essentials of style, feeling, and technique of a true artist.

Few pianists can so well sustain the unique romanticism of Schumann's long poetry. There was a real demonstration at the close of the program.

The day's proceedings at the Shoreham and Wardman Park Hotels included chamber works, choral music, piano solos, and the Musical Offering of Bach. Members of the convention heard and discussed a broad variety of subjects relating to nearly every field of music and music education.

British Limit Use of Copper, Zinc and Brass

LONDON, Dec. 28 (NYHT)—In a move back toward wartime austerity, the government banned the manufacture of several hundred peacetime articles which are made of metals needed for defense.

Minister of Supply G. R. Strauss announced that the government will prohibit unauthorized use of zinc, brass and copper beginning February 1. He plans to cut the supply of zinc to manufacturers by 40 percent.

Strauss explained the action was due to the shortage of zinc and the need to meet defense and export requirements.

The list prohibits the use of the prescribed metals for household appliances and domestic utensils, ornaments and dress accessories, stationery supplies, toys, furniture, hardware, luggage, electrical appliances and many items for housing construction. It covers everything from roofing sheets to tea strainers.

Green Loses Suit; Department 'Legal'

Arlington Treasurer John Locke Green yesterday lost his latest suit against the county—a bid to have Arlington's new real estate assessment department declared "illegal."

After only a 90-minute hearing, Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy denied that the Arlington County Board ordinance setting up the new department is based on an unconstitutional act of the Virginia General Assembly, as claimed by Green.

In arguing the case, the treasurer was joined by Denman T. Rucker, Arlington's Commonwealth's Attorney, who normally would defend the county in such a suit.

Taking Rucker's place as counsel for the county were Attorneys Edmund D. Campbell and Malcolm Miller.

Green and Rucker argued that the Assembly Act of 1942 under which the assessment department was established is a "special law" applying only to Arlington and Elizabeth City counties. Such special laws are prohibited by Section 63 of the Virginia Constitution, the attorneys said.

But Miller and Campbell told Judge McCarthy that the basic law applies to five Virginia counties, all of which adjoin large metropolitan areas, and that it therefore is not "special" or "local" legislation.

Yesterday's verdict gave Treasurer Green a .333 batting average in his legal contests with the county. Earlier this year he lost one decision to the county school board, but won a later suit against the same body.

Personal Estate Of $21,000 Left By 'Charlie' Ross

The will of the late Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary who died at his desk December 5, leaves his entire estate to his wife, Mrs. Florence Griffin Ross.

His personal estate is listed as approximately $21,000.

Mrs. Ross, who lives at 117 Kennedy dr., Chevy Chase, was named executor without bond in the will, admitted to probate in Montgomery County Orphans Court. The petition lists the amount of the personal estate and then says the real estate is held in the name of both the husband and wife

DETROIT, Dec. 28 (U.P.)—With this week's output the automobile industry will make its eight millionth vehicle of the year to set a new all-time production record, Automotive News said today.

The trade paper estimated that 6,663,461 cars and 1,340,781 trucks will have rolled off assembly lines by December 30, passing the eight-million mark by 4242 vehicles. That is one million more than have ever been produced in a 12-month period.

Proconsul

Mary T. Norton, who since 1924 has continuously represented the good people of Hudson County, N. J., in the United States Congress, would be among the last, we should suppose, to think herself qualified to serve as a member of the District of Columbia Board of Commissioners. In theory at least the Board of Commissioners is made up of persons representing the people of the District; and Mrs. Norton, a resident of New Jersey, could qualify for the local office only by a special act of Congress waiving the requirement of law that two of the Commissioners "must have been actual residents of the District for three years next before their appointment and have during that period claimed residence nowhere else." The Democratic Party politicos reported to be urging her appointment on President Truman are doing no service either to her interests or to the interests of the District.

Mrs. Norton has been an admirable member of Congress. During her quarter century of service, and especially when she was chairman of the House District Committee, she has been, moreover, a stanch friend of the District and an outspoken advocate of home rule. The people of this community, we are sure, have the highest regard for her and, if given an opportunity, might vote overwhelmingly to elect her a Commissioner, or even mayor, of Jersey City. But Washingtonians do not choose the government of Jersey City, and we can see no reason whatever why the people of Jersey City should choose the government of Washington.

Mrs. Norton is retiring from Congress because she no longer wishes to assume the arduous duties of that office. Being a woman of conscience, she would find the duties of a District commissionership no less arduous. The post is not, as some who have held it seemed to think, a sinecure or a haven of political retirement. Happily, Washington has citizens of its own, able and willing to discharge the heavy burdens of the assignment with vigor and devotion to their fellow citizens. We are confident that the President, himself a champion of self-government for the District, will not treat Washington as a conquered and occupied territory to be governed, like Germany or Japan, by an alien proconsul.

Rainmaking

Senator Anderson's proposal for Federal control of artificial rainmaking no doubt has some of its roots in a situation in his home State of New Mexico. Several large farmers there last summer financed private cloud-seeding operations over their lands. They reaped a good wheat crop, whereas most of the rest of the State was parched by drought. Whether or not the rainmakers had anything to do with it, they are being blamed for stealing someone else's rain.

Although the Weather Bureau remains skeptical about the utility of seeding clouds with dry ice (a procedure developed by Vincent Shaefer of the General Electric Co. several years ago), in many parts of the West rainmaking is a profitable business. Whole communities have thought sufficiently of the possibilities to hire regular rainmakers; New York City's experiment in replenishing its water supply will also be remembered. Some ambitious rainmakers believe that they may increase snowfall on the east side of the Continental Divide to bring a material increase in water runoff—and hence farm income.

What no one has yet proved, however, is whether the rain precipitated by cloud seeding is rain which would have fallen naturally elsewhere. Moreover, rain once turned on cannot always be turned off on schedule, and floods and other damage sometimes result. This newspaper already has noted that these imponderables would bring a demand for regulation of what might be called riparian rights in the sky. Several States are considering rainmaking legislation; meanwhile the rainmakers themselves reportedly fear the possibility of Federal laws as too dictatorial.

At first blush Senator Anderson's bill to establish a Federal weather control commission on the model of the Atomic Energy Commission, complete with military liaison committee, seems a little extreme. His commission would have authority to regulate seeding operations and fees charged, to exempt licensed seeders from damage suits and, most important, to promote further research and experimentation. But the potentialities of climate control are enormous. The weather belongs to all the people, and we dare say some sort of Federal supervision is necessary over attempts to monkey with it. When you think about it, this business of filching clouds could run into serious complications, especially if the clouds were claimed by some other country instead of just a neighboring State.

All of which goes to prove that Charles Mackay did not know what he was talking about when he wrote:

> The King . . .
> Can not order rain or shine—
> Nor can I.

For today the lines are those of John Dennis: "They will not let my play run; and yet they steal my thunder."

More Steel

The American Iron and Steel Institute has given out some very pertinent and dismaying information concerning the effect on the economy of a projected expansion of steelmaking capacity. Steel companies are planning to increase their output by nearly 10 million tons before the end of 1952, and are under pressure to raise their production sights still further. The institute notes that this new steel capacity cannot be created just by installing more machines and hiring more workers. Land has to be bought, buildings erected, furnaces built, power provided, and transportation facilities enlarged. More than a ton of iron ore is required to produce a ton of ingot steel. Supplies of scarce alloys, mostly imported, such as manganese, chromium, nickel, and cobalt, have to be increased. More coal, steel scrap, aluminum, etc., have to be used. Enough bricks to face a building a block square and 2 miles high are needed to line only 18 blast furnaces. Thousands of workers have to be hired and trained. In a tight labor market this diversion of labor is likely to result in less production of other essential goods.

To add to this catalog of woes, the institute calls attention to the great increase in the cost of building new steel plants. An open hearth shop that cost 8.5 million dollars in 1939, for instance, now costs 17 million dollars; the cost of a blast furnace has more than doubled during the same period. What does this add up to? Obviously it means that the production cost of a ton of steel in the new plants will rise and steel prices will doubtless rise, too. In our opinion, this explanation of what an increase in steel productive capacity implies should silence critics of the industry who clamor for a more ambitious expansion program.

Communist China: Next Step

Behind the scenes the preliminary jockeying has started over what to do with recalcitrant China. The United States is said to favor the utmost pressure on mainland China by way of assisting U. N. action in Korea. All-out war on mainland China seems to have been ruled out, but various sanctions have been canvassed, such as bombing industrial centers, a naval blockade, economic boycott, withdrawal of diplomatic relations. The other powers, however, are reported to be lukewarm to any sort of coercion.

In truth the problem is probably the most ticklish dilemma that has arisen since 1945. From almost every strategical standpoint, an accommodation is desirable with Communist China, yet the fate of the United Nations could easily be sealed by such an accommodation. Clearly, if some coercion is not exerted on Communist China, the standing of the United Nations will be undermined. Communist China has challenged the first peace-enforcement decision which the world organization has ever achieved. If the United Nations is not to share the fate of the League of Nations—first, of defiance, then of obloquy, and finally of death—then its record must not be tarnished. It certainly would be tarnished if the United Nations should yield to the bludgeon of Communist China—the bludgeon of a return of Formosa and a seat in the United Nations as the conditions of a cease-fire in Korea. In the circumstances the U. N. is duty bound to pursue its anti-aggression purpose in Korea so long as the situation there is tenable and the odds not too unequal, and to support that purpose in mainland China by any pressure that is practicable.

This is the criterion in sanctions policy toward mainland China—practicability. What is needed is enough pressure to back armed action in Korea in achieving an honorable settlement. No person who contemplates either the chances in a war with China or the major task confronting the United States in the Atlantic area would agree that war with China is practicable. The trouble is that some of the sanctions now under canvass have the same deficiency. As we found out between wars, sanctions constitute a kind of war (if, indeed, they do not lead inexorably to war) and must therefore be subjected to the same rule as war, viz, the achievement of a political end. It is necessary not only to impose your will upon the enemy, but to keep your enemy informed of your political objective, or the terms upon which you are ready to live in peace with him.

Alas, the rule has been set aside in recent times by the new formula of the knock-out blow and unconditional surrender. In other words, Clausewitz, as General Fuller notes in Armaments and History, has been reversed, and policy is becoming a continuation of war—which is nothing less than the beginning of barbarism. But, assuming some regard for a political end in our belligerent actions, bombing the industrial centers in China would serve no purpose whatsoever. In China there are no centers, industrial or otherwise, as the Japanese can testify. Even the sense of statehood is a relatively recent growth. A naval blockade would be more or less in the same category, for it would amount to little more than knuckle-rapping. China has a coastline 5650 miles in extent, along which the most adept smugglers in the world are accustomed to operate. It has relatively little use for foreign trade, anyway. Because of these limitations, either sanction would drive the unsuccessful sanctionist to offensive war, and in this enterprise our country would be bled to death.

There remain an economic boycott and the withdrawal of diplomatic relations. These require an agreement among all the U. N. members. No agreement is possible if we insist upon stopping all trade with Communist China. The aim, rather, ought to be to pick out, in addition, of course, to steel and finished weapons, a key commodity, and content ourselves with an embargo on that. Oil is the most suitable for such a purpose. China has some oil, but precious little, and deprivation of imports would undoubtedly hurt China and its ability to keep up aggression. As to a diplomatic break, this is likely to be a serious international issue, though it is difficult to see how it can be sidestepped. The Peking government has defied the cease-fire order of the United Nations and will not receive its Cease-Fire Committee. This committee, presumably, is awaiting a report from the U. N. committee in Korea, whereupon there will be no option but to confess failure, and leave the United Nations with the task of condemning and taking action against Communist China.

Yet the end-product of all this is unsatisfactory. It achieves no political or strategical objective, which, in the global contest, should be to neutralize Communist China. Neutralization requires positive action in the political field as well as negative action in the form of coercion. The United Nations is estopped by its very Charter from ameliorating the situation with any political contribution so long as Communist China is fighting in Korea. But the United States is not under the same inhibition. It remains for us, therefore, to keep our minds all the time not upon mere knuckle-rapping but upon ways and means of getting out of an impasse which, in large part, is of our own creation—in the sense that we have clung to Chiang Kai-shek beyond statecraft and self-interest.

How is this to be done? Something might possibly open up or could be opened up in the talks with Japan about a peace settlement. Policy will then have to be re-declared on Formosa and Korea, and it must be within the framework of the Cairo declaration—that is to say, Formosa to China and the creation of a free and independent Korea. Announcement of a policy in both respects in line with the need to neutralize China might promote a disposition on the part of the Chinese to quit their aggression, and then an honorable settlement might be worked out.

Unequal Punishment

The only institution we know of that continues blissfully to ignore the facts of our present-day inflation are the courts. This was strikingly illustrated on Christmas Day when Judges Gallagher and Casey handed out sentences described as "ranging from $1 or 2 days to $30 or 30 days." The shocking thing about such sentences is that any judge should consider a fine of $1 to be equivalent to 2 days in jail or a fine of $30 to equal 30 days of incarceration. No doubt there was once a balance between these respective punishments in the experience of the average man, but that balance has utterly disappeared. The result is that the judicial habit of saying "$30 or 30 days" imposes upon the unfortunate without funds a penalty many times as severe as upon the offender who can pay his fine.

In following this outmoded practice, the judges are reflecting the obsolescence of the law. Many of our criminal statutes were passed in an era when a day's pay amounted to about a dollar, and these remain unchanged on the statute books. As these laws now stand, it is impossible to find either reason or consistency behind their alternative punishments in terms of money or time in jail. For larceny after trust, the maximum penalty is $1000 or 10 years: for pandering, $1000 or 5 years; for various offenses, $1000 or 6 months. One section of the Defense Program Act passed last September prescribes a maximum penalty of 1 year in prison or a $10,000 fine. In other words, the time of an offender seems to be calculated as being worth about $27 a day under this section of the Defense Production Act and the time of an offender under the larceny statute at about 27 cents a day.

It is reasonable, of course, to set higher maximum fines when the violators of a particular law are likely to be wealthy persons; for the purpose of the penalty is to discourage violations. But it seems impossible to justify the gross variation in the maximum fines that are equated with a year in jail in many of the routine criminal statutes. The result is not selective punishment fitting the crime but gross inequality of punishments prescribed for similar offenses. It seems to us that the whole field of criminal law should be restudied with the object of eliminating these inequities and restoring some semblance of balance between punishments by fine and punishments by incarceration. Meanwhile judges could recognize that the men and women whom they sentence are living in 1950, not 1895. Apparently the judges have ample discretion to change "$30 or 30 days" to "$30 or 5 days," and if they do not have authority to make it, say "$150 or 30 days," as the circumstances might warrant, that little item of modernization should certainly be attended to.

Relinquishing "Rights"

We are faced with the problems of financing the defense of the United States and many of the non-Communist nations of the world against Communist aggression, and of controlling inflation at home. If we are to be successful in solving these problems it will be necessary, in many cases, to subordinate personal aims and desires to the larger interests of the Nation. This is a sacrifice that many people seem unwilling to make.

Since the new crisis, created by the situation in Korea, each group within our country has continued to pressure for such action as would insure the attainment of its objectives. Labor, management, farmers and politicians, for the most part, have continued the policy of "business as usual." In the current mobilization, the Government must, of necessity, restrict the sphere of action of these groups. Whenever this has been done, there has been opposition from the affected individuals, and an attempt to rationalize their position by stating that Government regulations are an infringement upon personal liberties and contrary to the public interest.

It is time we recognized that individual rights and freedom of action carry with them responsibility for their discretionary use. There is no such thing as an "absolute right." Each group, as a result of environment, education, and the way in which it interprets the social situation, has its own set of values, and will develop its own "bill of rights." In addition to the set of values peculiar to the group are rights and beliefs common to all of the Nation, and it is these latter which are the basis of our democratic society and must be preserved.

It is exceedingly difficult, in a democratic society such as ours which draws its power to act from the people, to secure the unanimity of opinion that permits decisive action for the good of the Nation. However, near and eminent danger, which is supposed to draw us together, is here, now, and it is the task of our leaders to impress upon the people this danger, and to adopt a course of action behind which we can unite.

The people must be made cognizant of the fact that unless internal differences can be set aside, our society, as we know it, will be destroyed. In brief, it is a question of giving up something or losing everything.

"Demagogue"

May I, as a subscriber to your very fine newspaper covering a period of some 20 years, take this opportunity to commend you upon your very fine, timely and, indeed, much needed editorial of December 24, "Demagogue"?

How can we hope to lead the world, or even our own United States if we are compelled to bow to men like Senator McCarthy and his like? Just think how fruitless is our effort in Korea, if we are to perpetuate the theories of the Senator, Fulton Lewis, Gerald K. Smith and their ilk?

I speak as a veteran of World War I, father of an only son in World War II, who is now on the verge of returning to service. I am a 100 percent American. Continue to stick with Drew Pearson. He has done more "to make democracy live" than 1000 McCarthys et al.

Abuse Of Acheson

Senator Murray's defense of Dean Acheson (December 20) and Wayne Williams' protest (December 16) against the abuse heaped on him are indeed like "the word spoken in due season, how good it is!" At this time of goodwill it is particularly offensive to find the hordes of spite and hatred concentrating upon men who have the courage to serve their country.

One of the imperfections of a democracy is that a man can give up peace, comfort, living his own life with his family and friends, with an assured future, and receive in return abuse, insults and misrepresentation, a meager salary, even threats to his life and his fellow-citizens expect him to take it in his stride, as other great men have done in the past. Is it any wonder that it grows daily more difficult to find men willing to exchange their own way of life for a public pillory?

Emergency President

If an atom bomb should strike Washington it is conceivable that not only our President but all of those who would naturally succeed him would be slain. Provision by Congress should be made at an early date for such a contingency.

My suggestion would be this: Have Congress enact laws elastic enough to cover such an emergency and sensible enough to command the confidence and respect of the people. We have good State Governors. They are elected by the people. Why not, in such a catastrophe automatically make the Governor of the most populous State the presidential successor?

"Unhappy Happy"

I fully agree with Mr. L. J. Dooley's criticism of your unfair editorial of December 18, "Unhappy Happy." His praise of Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler, was fully justified.

I have known "Happy" Chandler as a personal friend for many years; in fact, I was his guest while he was Governor of Kentucky. I already knew of his high moral principles, but it was there I learned first hand that it was his warm hearted human interest in people, not buffoonery, as you expressed it, that elected him. And never once did he have to lower his high standards in his appeal to the electorate.

But what was expected of him by the very small group of major league clubs who are so bent on ousting him? They could not give a single reason for doing so. Your own sports writer, Shirley Povich, hit the nail squarely on the head when he said, "They didn't want a baseball commissioner, they wanted a puppet." So I predict, that when these club owners meet again, and have felt the full impact of the booing fans, they will be glad to renew his contract.

Universal Service

Right now, before Congress convenes, we should begin facing some all-important facts.

We have exploited our soils and our forests and our minerals. Will we be stupid enough to exploit our manpower too?

It's like this: We have men that can fight and love to. They will be the best fighters. We have men that can study and pass on their knowledge. They should teach. We have those who can pursue knowledge. They should seek. We need them all. Let's not make fighters of the teachers. That would be silly. And let's husband our seekers, for they are our future.

Should Selective Service mean military service only or should it mean service to the whole economy? Should a professional military man direct it or an intelligent civilian?

Let's think. Let's really think.

Consolidating Our Defenses

The tragic events in Korea have demonstrated the necessity of a drastic resurvey of the role this Nation is playing in the present war against Russia.

As far as the public is permitted to know, the United States is committed to the major role of supplying not only the bulk of the war material but also the manpower. As far as known there has never been a public statement as to how far this Nation can go in carrying out these functions without ultimate collapse.

The primary duty of our leaders is to insure as far as possible the survival of our own Nation. Obviously, we should assist allies who will aid in the struggle against a common enemy, but this aid should not endanger our own survival.

The present policy is based on the assumption that the United States is able to supply, not only the bulk of the war material, but also of the military forces to carry on the war against the communist hordes of the world. The flimsiness of this assumption has been demonstrated in Korea.

The following facts seem self-evident:

(a) Russia is not deterred from starting a shooting war by fear of the atomic bomb or by the forces that the Allies hope to build up in western Europe. She does hesitate on account of a wholesome respect for the vast potential power of the United States.

(b) The organization of an allied army in western Europe able to withstand the manpower superiority of Russia is hardly possible.

(c) At the present rate, the effort to finance "world democracy" will lead eventually to national bankruptcy.

The following action is recommended:

(a) A statement to Russia that any further advance on her part in western Europe or in the Far East means war with the United States.

(b) A statement to our allies, including Nationalist China, that our aid in case of war will consist of material, navy, air and limited amphibious forces.

(c) Manpower, en masse, will not be sent outside of the limits of the American continents.

(d) All possible aid to be given to dissident elements within the Soviet orbit.

(e) Build up the Navy, Marine Corps, Air Forces, and Amphibious forces to a point where they can attack anywhere on the vast periphery of Russia.

(f) Organize the Army for internal defense and to resist any Communist action in the Western Hemisphere.

(g) Appoint a board with former President Hoover as chairman, and outstanding men, such as Vannevar Bush, Mr. Baruch, John Hancock, Senator Byrd, several leading industrialists, and military men as advisers, to study the whole problem of our economic, industrial, and military resources and to draw up a general plan.

The above course may be called isolationist. It is simply realism—a proposed effort to meet the facts of life as we see them today, and to chart a course that will give us the best chance of national survival.

Eisenhower's Tightrope

By Marquis Childs

The NATO Twins

ACCORDING to present plans, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower will fly to Europe January 7. It will be a fateful return for the man who more than any other symbolizes the unity of the West so perilously and painfully won in that other war.

Eisenhower's assignment is to bring about the kind of agreement among the North Atlantic powers which will make it possible to forge a common defense force. But his appointment has a larger significance. By his very presence he will send a new current of hope and optimism through western Europe, underwriting the belief that by resolute and swift rearmament the West can be defended from communism.

There is no guarantee that this assignment can be successfully carried through even with all the weight of General Ike's prestige, skill and personality. It is very late and the effort to rally Europe to rebuild its defenses has been long delayed. The new neutralism, which is a form of pessimistic futility, has taken deep root both in Europe and America.

Among some policy planners subscribing completely to the necessity to rearm western Europe there has been doubt over sending Ike to direct the job. This has nothing to do with his abilities. But the feeling was that since he is one of our greatest national assets, he should not be risked in a venture in which the odds were so formidable against success.

EISENHOWER is, of course, more than a military asset. In a poll taken by the Saturday Review of Literature recently he was voted the greatest living American. This reflects his value as a kind of Stone of Scone—a symbol of unity and continuity.

Should it prove impossible to unify western Europe behind a rearmament drive that is more than mere paper planning, some of the value of this symbol would be lost. Or if Soviet armies should overrun Europe in the spring, as the extreme pessimists are now saying, the Eisenhower symbol would be tarnished by defeat, even though that defeat would have nothing to do with the General's abilities.

Since he is a realist, these thoughts must have occurred to Eisenhower. But if he harbors any doubts, he has kept them from even his closest associates. It is not in character for him to complain.

Before he leaves for Europe, Eisenhower will confer with President Truman, Secretary of State Dean Acheson and the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He will get an intensive briefing on the nature of his assignment such as he has not had up to this point.

As his deputy Eisenhower will take with him Lieut. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, who has been deputy chief of staff of the Army. This is a most fortunate choice. Gruenther knows postwar Europe more intimately and in more detail than Eisenhower himself. He has a knowledge of the political currents in the world today that is exceptional in the American military establishment.

Moreover, Eisenhower has an admiration for Gruenther which is heartily returned. Between the younger and the older man—Gruenther is 51 and Eisenhower is 60—there is a friendly working relationship that can be resumed without delay.

THEIR first trip to Europe will be brief. They will make a preliminary survey, talking to military commanders in the North Atlantic Treaty countries. Incidentally, the Pentagon now refers to Eisenhower and Gruenther as the NATO twins.

This, too, will be a matter of reestablishing familiar relationships. Most of the men they will sit down with are comrades-in-arms out of World War II. They are waiting to give the NATO twins the warmest possible welcome, since Eisenhower is literally the answer to the prayers they have been saying for a long time. They are assuming that more American troops, plus quantities of American arms, will give substance to the pale ghost of western European defense.

When Eisenhower and Gruenther return toward the end of January, they will confer at length again with civilian and military officials. Presumably while on their survey trip, they will have selected a permanent headquarters which is expected to be somewhere in France. The next move, after the second go-round of conferences, will be to return for the long hard pull.

When a man is walking across Niagara Falls on a tightrope, it is not a very good idea for the spectators to shout criticism and complaint. That is approximately what General Ike will be doing. The course is just about as perilous and as difficult.

Certainly no man is immune from criticism and that goes for generals as well as Presidents and politicians. But it seems to me that in these first difficult months, we ought to try to help if we can the good soldier on whom such a heavy burden has been placed. Or if we can't help, we should at least make a New Year's resolution to try not to hinder him.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

The Phony War

IT IS a bitter fact to have to record, but it is still a fact, that an actual majority of the American planners and policy makers now probably hope that our beachhead in Korea will prove untenable. We are to be "pushed out" by the new Chinese offensive, and we are to evacuate "with honor"; but this is considered preferable to holding our ground.

The practical reasons for wanting our troops out of Korea at this time are obvious enough. Japan, which has vastly more strategic importance than Korea, is denuded. An adequate garrison must be reestablished in Japan. The divisions to do this are in Korea.

Europe, which has still more strategic importance than any point in Asia, is obviously threatened with aggression in the spring. New American divisions must somehow be created, if we are to hold even our minimum bases overseas. As recently as six weeks ago the training of even one additional division was being put off by the Army Field Forces, because the training cadres were also in Korea.

WHAT is less obvious is why, if these needs are now so urgent, we ever sent our men into Korea in the first place. But the answer to this question is also rather simple, if you remember the contemporary atmosphere.

In effect, the purpose of the intervention in Korea was to prevent a general war. The American policy makers were convinced that the Soviet Union did not want to run the risk of a general war beginning in Korea. But they were also convinced that the Korean aggression was the first part of a long program of similar aggression which, if continued, would lead to a Munich-like situation.

On these assumptions, the best course was to stop the Soviet program in Korea, much as Hitler might have been challenged in the Rhineland or in Austria, before the Munich stage was reached. This was why the decision to intervene was made. If Stalin's mind could have been read in July, it is quite likely that all the reasons for this decision would have been found to be correct.

AT some moment, however, probably after the Korean fighting had disclosed the true extent of American disarmament, the masters of the Kremlin concluded they were willing to risk a general war after all. Furthermore, they greatly contracted the whole timetable of their immense imperialist program. These are the obvious meanings of the peculiarly timed Chinese intervention, which has created a world situation rather like the situation after the Nazi conquest of Poland, but before the phony war ended in the grand assault on France.

Because of this new development, the former assumptions of our policy have now been utterly exploded. The intervention in Korea has now utterly failed of its preventive purpose. Even if, by great efforts, we could reconquer the lost part of Korea, this distant peninsula is still not the place where we ought to invest our main strength, now that general war is an imminent danger and even a strong, early probability. Thus the change in view of the policy makers is seen to be logical.

WHAT is still less obvious, however, is why our troops have not been recalled already, since this change of view has thus occurred. Unnecessary loss of life will be the least penalty if we are "pushed out." And what if we are not "pushed out?" What if most of our available divisions remain pinned down in a strategically nonvital area, in this time of acute world-danger?

The solution of this riddle can be given in three words—lack of guts. There was only one way to recall our troops voluntarily from Korea, without disastrous loss of American prestige and resulting panic among our allies. We should have had to admit the wrongness of our former assumptions. We should have had to state, flatly and plainly, that we were treating the new world situation as warlike in the fullest sense. We should have had to make it very clear that the withdrawal from Korea was no surrender in any sense, but a simple military redisposition of forces solely aimed to gain victory in the end.

This method of withdrawing from Korea would have had no hint of former President Hoover's scuttle-and-run or Joseph P. Kennedy's crawling-on-the-belly. It would have invigorated rather than demoralized the effort of this country and the Western Allies, by proving American firmness. But it would also have required a confession of error, an admission of the great existing danger, an order for full American mobilization, and a firm way of dealing with General of the Army Douglas MacArthur. All these, in turn, would have required political guts, a commodity in very short supply in Washington at present. Hence the curious compromise that has been adopted thus far.

U. N. Army Could Have Halted Korean War, Bunche Says

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Dr. Ralph Bunche yesterday called for the building-up of an effective international army, declaring that the Korean war would never have started if such a military force had existed.

"The veto notwithstanding, said the Nobel Prize winner and chairman of the U. N. Trusteeship Council, "the U. N. could have been prepared to put forward in peace the kind of effort they put forth in war.

"They did not," he told the opening session of the 46th annual meeting of the American Political Science Association, "and peace and the U. N. have been placed in extremely grave jeopardy."

Europe Fears New Isolationism

About 2000 persons are attending the three-day meeting of the association at the Mayflower and Statler Hotels.

Bunche, who has only recently returned from a tour of Europe, said the anti-Communist European nations' greatest fear is that the United States might turn back to isolationism in reaction to the reverses in Korea. Former President Hoover's recent speech urging concentration on Western Hemisphere defense heightened this anxiety, he reported.

Many are concerned, too, he said, "lest the United States get in a major Far Eastern war and thus minimize American help to Europe if war breaks out there."

Bunche, who concluded the successful drive for Israel-Arab peace in the Near East, said he feels war will not come, but added that the U. N. must be militarily strong so "it can be sure the forces of peace are overwhelming."

It was because "last June the U. N. found itself militarily unprepared to resist aggression," that the current situation exists, he said. "If the armies we now are frantically building had been ready then, I feel certain there would be no Korean crisis today."

President Truman in a letter to Dr. James K. Pollock, of the University of Michigan, association president,, said the organization in recent years had "presented wise and constructive proposals for the improvement of our governmental machinery," and asked for its "advice" on how to persuade more Americans to vote in elections and increase their "participation in government."

Declaring that in the past 10 years there had been a marked decline in the percentage of eligible voters going to the polls, the President said:

"Perhaps an initial study by a nonpartisan commission might reveal the extent of voting and nonvoting, and give us a clearer understanding of why the percentage of voters is declining and what can be done about it."

Pollock replied in a letter that members of the association would "begin at once" to draft recommendations on the subject.

Pollock, in his presidential address at the Hotel Statler last night, urged that the Constitution be amended to permit confirmation of treaties by a majority vote of both houses of Congress, instead of by a two thirds vote of the Senate alone, as now.

The need for such an amendment, he said, "arises not from any desire to lessen the effectiveness of the United States Senate, but rather from the necessity of bringing the present constitutional provision into accord with the requirement of present international life, both at home and abroad."

Pollock, former member of the Hoover Commission and adviser to the United States Military Governor and United States High Commissioner in Germany, also urged "some prompt retooling" of "our organization for the conduct of foreign relations."

New Type of Civil Servant

Included in the "retooling" would be a new type of public servant trained in the functions of both State and Defense departments, because "it is just as bad to have several spokesmen for America in a foreign capital as it is to have several of them in Washington."

A feature of the dinner was the presentation of annual awards—scrolls—to three university teachers for outstanding publications in the field of government and political science.

The winners and awards are: Stephen Kemp Bailey of Wesleyan State University, Connecticut, for "Congress Makes a Law," Woodrow Wilson Foundation Award; Arthur N. Holcombe, Harvard University, for "Our More Perfect Union, Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial Foundation Award; and John B. Condliffe, University of California at Berkeley, "The Commerce of Nations, Freedom House-Willkie Memorial Building Awards."

Sir Sidney Caine, finance minister, British Embassy, spoke on "International versus National Action under Point Four" at a luncheon meeting yesterday.

Leon Keyserling, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, will speak at the 12:15 p. m. luncheon today in the Hotel Mayflower ballroom.

Look Into Eyes of Animals Gives New Concept on Vision

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

CLEVELAND, Dec. 28.—A Chicago scientist has looked into the eyes of animals and found something which may change present concepts on how the eyes work, he reported here today.

Importance of the finding, it was said, is that it opens up a whole new field of study in vision processes—and blindness.

The scientist, Dr. Phil S. Shurrager, professor and head of the Department of Psychology, Illinois Institute of Technology, made his initial report today to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Radio Detector

Other scientists told of the development of a wireless device for recording electrical output of the brain, heart and muscles, without restricting the patient's movements, and success in laboratory production of Compound F, the rare anti-arthritic hormone which was isolated along with Compound E (cortisone), in 1937.

Dr. Shurrager told the scientists he found that the eyes apparently can use light to create solids instantly, much in the same manner that plants combine carbon dioxide and water with light to grow.

Thus it may be that the process (photo-synthesis) formerly believed confined to plants, may well be an activating agent in seeing, or—equally important to study—in vision defects and blindness, he said.

Role Still Unknown

He emphasized, however, that the role of newly-uncovered chemistry within the eye is still unknown, and discussion of its importance to sight "is still highly speculative."

Dr. Shurrager said he uncovered the process in the core of the eye. That transparent bulk has been regarded as serving merely to shape the lens, at the front of the eye, from the retina at the back, where the image is registered.

Blackout eyes of animals killed during the studies, the scientist explained, were found to be filled with a liquid, rather than the jelly-like matter normally found in both living and dead eyes. Subsequently, it was noted that by merely passing light through the liquid the solution was converted to a gelatinous state.

Diagnostic Device

At the same session, members of the Holter Research Foundation, Inc., of Helena, Mont., introduced a new diagnostic device for recording electrical outputs of the brain, heart and muscles of patients during unrestricted activities.

It consisted of a small, lightweight, portable electronic unit carried in the pocket of the person being tested. The portable part of the instrument "radios" energy impulses of bodily activity to a companion machine which records such impulses on a screen, or photographically.

Advantage of the instrument, said Dr. Norman J. Holter, director of the foundation, is that observations can be made without interference with the patient's normal physical activities.

Compound F Production

Laboratory production of Compound F, the hormone believed to possess anti-arthritic activity comparable to cortisone was reported under way to determine if Compound F will give similar or better results against rheumatism, arthritis, and some cancers than cortisone, without the bad side effects.

The successful synthesis of the hormone was discussed by Dr. Max Tishler, chemist of Merck & Co. Laboratories, Rahway, N. J.

The President's Calling List

President Truman had the following White House appointments yesterday:

11 a. m.—Budget Director Frederick Lawton.

11:30 a. m.—Albert J. Loveland, defeated Democratic senatorial candidate in Iowa.

12 noon—Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, Louis Brownlow and Arthur Sweetser, of Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

12:15 p. m.—Gordon Gray, president, University of North Carolina.

12:30 p. m.—Secretary of State Acheson.

1 p. m.—Lunch.

4 p. m.—Press and radio conference.

Ask Transfer of 5 Housing Projects

The District Commissioners yesterday asked the Public Housing Administration to transfer title to five housing projects here to the National Capital Housing Authority.

A PHA spokesman said the request would probably not be approved at this time because of a freeze order issued last summer on disposition of defense housing projects.

The projects, which provide housing for about 800 families east of the Anacostia River, are Stoddert, Knox Hill, Highland, Twenty-First Street and Lily Ponds. NCHA officials have said the transfer would mean eventual eviction of some tenants

GOP to Plan '52 Campaign Here Jan. 26

By the United Press

The Republican National Committee will meet here January 26 to draft strategy aimed at parlaying its recent election gains into recapture of the Presidency and Congress in 1952, it was announced yesterday.

GOP National Chairman Guy Gabrielson disclosed plans for the first conference of party leaders since the November 7 election, in which Republicans drastically cut Democratic majorities in both houses of Congress.

His statement made no boasting predictions of GOP successes in 1952. But it clearly reflected the newly revived Republican hopes of taking over the White House after a 20-year Democratic tenancy. Gabrielson said the purpose of the meeting "is to set an early start on our 1951 operations which will lay the foundation for a driving campaign in the presidential election of 1952."

"Organization and information are the twin anchors of our program," he said. "The recent election demonstrated that an informed, aroused electorate, properly organized, will vote Republican."

Gabrielson said immediate GOP goals to be laid before the 105 national committee members will be:

1. Reelection of 20 Republican Senators whose terms expire in 1952.

2. Reelection of the 199 GOP Representatives in the Eighty-second Congress to the Eighty-third Congress.

3. Capture of "as many as possible" of 12 Democratic Senate seats at stake in 1952. The GOP needs only two seats more than they will hold in the Eighty-second Congress to control the Senate.

4. Election of at least 39 GOP candidates to House seats now held by Democrats from closely-contested districts. This would give the GOP control of the House.

Two Parties in South

5. A "real" two-party system in the South. A seven-member subcommittee was named earlier this month to start building the small-GOP force in the South into a real second-party challenge to the long Democratic near-monopoly.

Gabrielson will ask the national committee for permission to appoint a committee to recommend the time and place for the next national GOP convention—usually held in June of election years. Philadelphia and Chicago are expected to make strong bids for the conclave. Atlantic City and San Francisco also may seek the convention.

Anonymous Admirer Sends Ilse Koch Nylons

MUNICH, Dec. 28 (AP).—Somebody remembered Ilse Koch for Christmas.

The former "Red Witch of Buchenwald," on trial before a German court for alleged brutalities against inmates of the concentration camp, received a pair of nylon stockings.

Mrs. Koch's lawyer, Dr. Alfred Seidl, said an anonymous donor mailed them to him for delivery to her.

Bounds Unknown

New Theory Has Universe Much Vaster

HAVERFORD, Pa., Dec. 28 (AP). A new estimate that the universe is so vast there is an individual Milky Way of stars for each human being who ever lived, was reported to the American Astronomical Society today.

The Milky Way is the star system to which the earth belongs, a cartwheel of hundreds of millions of stars. Astronomers call such a system a galaxy, and the new estimate of creation is the number of separate galaxies, or Milky Ways.

The number reported in today's new appraisal of the universe is 200 billion. The space through which these star galaxies are scattered is so immense Mount Palomar's 200-inch telescope would reach only a small percent of the distance across.

No Sign of Center on Boundary

Mount Palomar, in California, is the world's greatest telescope. It doubles the distance man previously could see. It quadruples the volume of space he can explore. Yet thus far there is no sign anywhere of a center in this galaxy-filled part of space, nor of any outer boundary.

The new estimate of size was made by Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard College Observatory. It is based on 18 years of photographing the galaxies with 80 million light years of earth the distance light travels in 80 million years.

The Harvard photographic plates, Dr. Shapley said, probably contain 1 million galaxies. Studies of 250,000 of these galaxies leads to the astonishing estimate of the size of creation. These photographed galaxies are seen in only about half of the sky. The other half is obscured by dust and gas clouds in our own familiar Milky Way.

Billion Galaxies Visible

Dr. Shapley said in the visible half of the sky the number of galaxies appears to be about one billion, out to the billion-light-year distance the Palomar telescope can see. He said there probably is a second billion in the obscured half of the heavens.

"The volume of a billion light radius," he said, still appears to be a small fraction of the galaxy-populated universe, and probably not over one persent of the galaxies are in that volumne.

The estimates are based on the apparent uniformity of distribution of the galaxies, of which he said:

"All through the Harvard census (of galaxies) is found a clumpiness. They come in pairs, groups, clusters and larger aggregations, much as the human population of the United States is unevenly distributed but averages 50 persons per square mile."

These same studies, Dr. Shapley said, show the universe is still in a "youthful state." The evidence for cosmic youth is the shape of the galaxies, which start with spiral, or pinwheel forms, and spread with age into spherical forms. About half of them still are spiral.

Service Corps of Scientists Urged by A-Group Member

CLEVELAND, Dec. 28 (AP).—Henry D. Smyth, member of the Atomic Energy Commission, today proposed creation of a scientific service corps and student science corps in a far-reaching war mobilization of United States scientific brains and skills.

The Nation must prepare for "a 20-year period of tension" in which major or minor wars might break out at any time, he declared.

"Our survival is at stake," and we must use "all our strength, our material resources and our manpower in the wisest possible way," he told the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Major War Asset

"Men of science have become a major war asset," and are "the tools of war needed for the preservation of our freedom," said the author of the Smyth report on atomic energy.

The scientific service corps would be based on a national roster of scientists, and directed by a scientific manpower board responsible to the President, not to the Defense Department, Dr. Smyth said.

It would be "a civilian organization without ranks or uniforms," and the manpower board's job would be "to get the right man in the right job." It would have power to keep a scientist out of or put him into the Army, Navy or Air Force, or switch him about as needed.

Makeup of Corps

Only scientists of military age would be required to join this corps. Older scientists would be advised as to how they might best serve:

This country probably will be outnumbered, the speaker continued, in any future war. "We can only beat our enemies by being much brighter, much cooler and more farsighted than they are. We must use our weapons and men more skillfully than they," Dr. Smyth stated.

The student science corps would enroll science students of high intelligence and promise in their freshman year. They would through graduate school training.

Others only technically competent would be released to the military or to civilian life after finishing college.

Demiranda, Surinam Prime Minister, Resigns

PARAMARIBO, Surinam, Dec. 28 (AP).—Prime Minister Julius Demiranda resigned today.

Dr. Demiranda has been prime minister since January 20, when this country — formerly Dutch Guiana—became a semiautonomous state with a new constitution giving it authority over its own internal affairs.

33 U. S. Agencies Get Tentative Approval Of Work Rating Plans

Efficiency ratings are out. Performance ratings are in. The change-over takes effect today under a law approved 6 months ago.

Thirty-three different agencies up to yesterday had been given tentative approval by Civil Service of their performance rating plans. These are among the changes that will be made under them:

Employes rated Good, Very Good & Excellent will have their ratings converted to Satisfactory until the new systems are in full operation in their agencies.

Hereafter, employes will be rated either Unsatisfactory, Satisfactory, or Outstanding. No agency has been authorized by Civil Service to use a fourth rating level.

Each employe must be told in detail the particular requirements of his job. The agency has the option of doing it either in writing or orally.

Before any employe can be given an Unsatisfactory rating he must be warned at least 90 days in advance, told in detail of his shortcomings, and what he can do to improve his work.

Many agencies still haven't had their proposed rating systems okayed by Civil Service. Their failure to do so presents a serious problem to their employes. Some officials believe that these agencies can't legally give their employes in-grade promotions until their rating plans are in effect. The Comptroller General will be asked to rule on this point.

OES: Thomas Klechak has been appointed special assistant to Price Administrator Mike DiSalle. He transferred from the Institute of Inter-American Affairs where he was personnel officer. He has taken a leading role in the work of the Federal Personnel Council.

Also slated to be appointed a DiSalle assistant is Arnold F. Shaw, an attorney in Justice's Criminal Division. Clayton Miller, Commerce's able administrative expert, is ticketed to be chief of the management staff at Economic Stablization, and Edison Montgomery, Maritime's management director, will be one of his assistants.

DEFENSE: John E. Moore of the Federal Personnel Council, yesterday was appointed personnel director for the Secretary's Office, Defense Department. A very good selection.

FCC: Newly elected members of Federal Communications' employe representative board are: Earl J. Lombard, Elizabeth Smith, Sally Blaine, Ethel Richardson, Earl Stanley, John McAllister, William North, Harold Anderson, Willam Hunter, Waleska Watson, J. B. Lowell, Raymond Smith, John Wicker and Ivan Loucks.

VA: Thirteen employes in VA's regional office here yesterday were given in-grade promotions for superior accomplishments. They are S. H. Parkins, Kenneth A. Wismer, Charles J. Murphy, Gordon O. Johnson, Mary J. Murray, Denis J. McHugh, Doris McCown, Homer Fatt, William D. Dworkin, Edwin M. Brown, Lorelda E. Rudd, Juanita Clowers, and Margaret Baker.

AFGE: Representative Walsh (D., Ind.), is now given the best chance to be elected national president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes to succeed the late Henry C. Iler. A stanch friend of Government workers, Walsh failed to be re-elected to Congress.

Two other candidates who will be placed in nomination when the union's executive council meets here Tuesday are James Campbell of Cincinnati, a Civil Service Commission official, and Cecil Custer, a Civil Service official here. Vice President John Smith of Philadelphia, has declined to be a candidate for personal reasons.

Meantime, two new national vice presidents have been elected and they will vote to name a new president. They are Lawrence Wainwright of the Bolling Field Air Base, and Paul R. Young of St. Paul.

MARITIME: Four of its top officials in the comptroller's office are retiring. They are A. C. Waller, chief of credits & collections, who will be succeeded by Frank Lynch; George Bentley, Edward Hawkins, and Joseph Peters. Between them they have 147 years of Federal service.

SEC: Joseph Cirminello, the father of quadruplets, is being transferred from headquarters of the Securities & Exchange Commission here to the agency's office in New York. His quads are 6 years old. SEC gave him promotion when they were born.

Police Shift Search for 3 Va. Escapees To D. C. Area

Culpeper Prisoners Fled in Auto in This Direction, Clews Indicate

Three "desperate" convicts who escaped from Virginia State Prison Camp 11 at Culpeper early Wednesday may be hiding out in the Washington area, Virginia State Police said yesterday.

The belief that the men may have headed for the District was prompted by discovery, near Manassas, of an automobile in which they were thought to have fled. The automobile, reported missing from a house near the prison camp, was discovered by Trooper Philip Herndon on a road between Manassas and Nokesville, less than 30 miles from Washington.

Reported theft of another automobile in Nokesville late Wednesday led police to think the men had abandoned the first car there.

Police described the car stolen at Nokesville as a black 1949 Ford sedan-coupe with a 1950 hood. The original Virginia license for the car was numbered 35-934, but it "might" be equipped with Virginia license 487-472, stolen from the car taken earlier, police warned.

The escapees are Raymond J. Blais, 24, of Pawtucket, R. I.; Orvil Richards, 27, of Roanoke, and Roy Allen Kelly, 22, of Wise County, Va. With a fourth man, they escaped about 2 a. m. Wednesday after overpowering a guard at the Culpeper camp.

The fourth prisoner, Curtis B. Fultz, 30, of Wise County, was captured in a wooded area about 6 miles from the prison camp at 11 a. m. Wednesday.

Faulty Light On 34th St. Is Replaced

A faulty traffic light at 34th and Macomb sts. nw., where Alben B. Truitt, 17, grandson of Vice President Alben W. Barkley, was involved in a traffic accident last Monday afternoon, was repaired yesterday.

The light, which should have been operating on regular red and green signals over the entire Christmas weekend, had been blinking red for several days, a spokesman for the Department of Vehicles and Traffic said. The light usually operates on blinking red only between 1 a. m. and 6 a. m., he added.

A repairman fixed a contact failure in the switch, but it still failed to operate properly. A new clock finally was put in the switch yesterday, the spokesman said.

Truitt was driving his mother's car when it was in collision with another car driven by Miss Kathleen R. McCarthy, 28, of 3520 34th st. nw. The case was turned over to the Juvenile Bureau for investigation.

Three-Alarm Fire Sweeps D. C. Factory

Electronics Plant Partially Wrecked; Loss Estimated At Quarter-Million

A three-alarm fire last night caused an estimated quarter of a million dollars damage to the plant of Schuttig and Co. Inc., manufacturers of aircraft electronics equipment, at 9th and Kearney sts. ne.

The fire was discovered shortly before 9:30 p. m. by a neighbor and was brought under control by firemen within 40 minutes. The southern end of the building was burned out on the first floor and the second floor was damaged by smoke and water.

The fire marshal's office began an investigation of the possibility of sabotage in connection with the blaze. Leonard A. Schuttig, the owner, of Wheaton, Md., said, however, that although the company manufactures equipment under Government contract, none of it is "top secret stuff."

The two-story brick building occupies almost a block, running north and south on 9th st. between Kearney and Jackson sts.

C. B. Shellman, 69, nightwatchman of 3426 9th st. ne., was on duty, but left the building about 9:05 p. m. to get a sandwich. He said there was no sign of fire when he left.

William Bohne, who lives across the street at 3213 9th st. ne., saw the blaze and turned in the first alarm. He said flames were leaping out of the receiving room on the first floor.

The southern half of the building included a stockroom, receiving room, paint shop and part of the assembly room. The flames ate through to the second floor, the main assembly room.

Some 250 pieces of equipment in their final stages of assembly were destroyed there. Schuttig valued them at $300 each. The first shipment of equipment under a new Government contract was scheduled to go out today. It was destroyed.

In a Christmas tree fire Wednesday night, a young mother and a roomer were burned slightly while rescuing the woman's two small daughters. Faulty wiring was blamed by the Fire Marshal's office.

Mrs. Arthur Rice, 30 of 20 New York ave. ne., wife of an Airforce sergeant, was burned about the hands, police said, when she pushed the tree away from her daughters, Virginia, 2, and Patricia Ann, 13 months.

Paul Owens, 45, was burned about his face and head when he carried the younger child to safety.

Sergeant Rice, who was home for Christmas, left Wednesday afternoon to go back to his station at Eglin Base, in Florida.

Wastebasket Fire Empties Army Building

Approximately 2000 employes of the Army Headquarters offices in a temporary building across Mount Vernon hwy. from National Airport, filed to the street yesterday afternoon because of a wastebasket fire.

Watchman, Blaze Victim, Identified

A night watchman, who was burned to death early yesterday in a fire at a junk yard at 309 1st st. sw., has been identified as Bennie Gibson, 24, of 125 F st. sw., police said.

Marine Dead, 7 Injured In Truck-Car Crash in Md.

Dead Man Planned Wedding on Leave; 3 Hurt in Another Accident in Virginia

A Marine was killed and four other Marines and three Annapolis farmers were injured in the collision of a car and a two-ton truck at Crain Highway and Central ave., in Hall, Md., shortly after 3 p. m. yesterday.

The accident scene is about 12 miles from the District line.

The dead man was identified as Corpl. Donald J. Walker, 26, of Rockland, Me. Police said he was the driver of the car in which the other Marines were passengers.

Admitted to Bolling Field Air Force Base Hospital in serious condition were Corpl. John F. Strall, 24, of Hackensack, N. J., who suffered a fractured left leg and multiple face cuts, and Pfc. Robert LaPointe, 31, of Augusta, Me., who received a possible skull fracture.

Admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital, where their conditions were reported to be undetermined, were Pfc. LeRoy Robert Peabody, 21, who suffered head injuries, and Pfc. Harold G. Manwaring, 28, who received multiple contusions.

The three occupants of the truck were taken to Anne Arundel County General Hospital in Annapolis. Admitted there in serious condition were Ray Williams, 41, and his nephew, Paul Williams, 17. The third man, Albert Greiger, 34, was treated for minor injuries. Police said all three live near Annapolis.

The five Marines were en route to Maine on a holiday furlough from Camp LeJeune, N. C., Prince Georges County Police said.

Police said the auto was heading north on Crain highway at a "very high rate of speed." The driver apparently jammed on his brakes when he saw a red light at the intersection, but he could not stop, according to police.

Two mechanics there, Robert Priset and Eugene Kaufman, rushed out with hand extinguishers and quickly put out the blaze, police said. A bookkeeper there, Mrs. Marjorie Williams, who said she had nursing experience, gave first aid to the injured.

The rescue squads of District Heights, Marlboro, Bowie and Glenn Dale were called to the scene to transport the injured.

Son of Representative Dies in West Virginia

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 28 (AP)—Jared B. Bailey, 22-year-old son of Representative M. Bailey (D., W. Va.), died in a hospital today of injuries suffered three days ago in an automobile accident.

City police said Bailey's car and a taxicab collided at a Charleston street intersection.

'Y' Bridge Favored for E. Capitol St.

D. C. Heads Like 3 Plans With Split Span, Overpass

The District Commissioners indicated yesterday they favor a Y-shaped bridge across the Anacostia River at E. Capitol st.

They did not give final approval to any location. But they viewed preliminary plans for nine locations and ordered "more detailed plans" drawn for three, District Highway Director J. N. Robertson said.

Each of the three contemplates a Y-shaped span linking E. Capitol st. on the east side with Independence ave. se. and C st. ne. on the west, he said.

The only major difference between the three plans is on the point where the bridge splits, Robertson said. Each of the three proposes underpassing Minnesota ave., and perhaps also the railroad tracks on the east side of the river.

The C st. approach would lead into Constitution ave. ne., by way of North Carolina ave., Robertson said. If one of these plans is adopted, Independence ave. se., would become one-way eastbound, and Constitution ave. ne., one-way westbound.

Each of the three plans calls for a low-level bridge, about 30 feet above the river, without a drawbridge. And each would cost less than the 12 million dollars authorized by Congress, he said.

Robertson said six other plans had been ruled out, for the present at least, either because they were too expensive or made "inadequate provisions for traffic." They have not been finally rejected, however, and may be reconsidered

AWOL Is Charge

Silver Spring Policeman Suspended

Police Corpl. Joseph W. Ward, of the Silver Spring substation, has been suspended on charges of being absent from duty without leave, insubordination and conduct prejudicial to the good order of the Montgomery County Police Force.

Ward was notified yesterday that he had been suspended without pay for 30 days pending action by the county Personnel Board. Chief of Police Charles M. Orme recommended that he be dismissed.

Orme charged that Ward was absent from duty from December 19 until last Tuesday and that efforts to reach him on the phone and have him return to duty were futile. Orme and Inspector James S. McAuliffe visited his home at 6912 Waukasha rd., Glen Echo Heights, Md., Tuesday, at which time Chief Orme suspended him from duty.

Ward is 45 years old and is married and has three children. He can ask for a hearing within five days. If no petition is filed within five days, the board can proceed with action on the charges and recommendation.

Ward has been a member of the force since 1935 except for a period from February, 1940, to April, 1942, when he served as a deputy sheriff.

Oddly Masked Bandit Doesn't Amuse Victim

Robs Hacker of $4.80 After Stop to Put on Black Stocking Cap

A bandit, comically masked in a black stocking cap, didn't look funny to cab driver Thomas Lyon, 47, who turned over $4.80—upon request—early yesterday.

Lyon, who lives at 518 7th st. se., said he picked up the thief about 3:45 a. m. at the Yellow Cab Co.'s lot at 1801 New York ave. ne. He drove the man, as directed, to a house in the 1100 block of Bladensburg rd ne.

Then Lyon waited while the man went inside to get some change. A few minutes later his passenger came out, wearing the stocking cap pulled over his face, with two jagged slits in it to see through, Lyon said.

Startled at the man's appearance, Lyon didn't waste time gaping, but handed over his money when the bandit demanded it.

Thieves Steal 2 Safes; Get $1700 in Cash

Safecrackers carted away two 400-pound safes from two firms in the 100 block of Ingraham st. ne., hacked them open and stole $1700 early yesterday.

One of the safes, containing $1600, was taken from the Cushwa Brick & Building Supply Co. at 137 Ingraham st. The other, with $100, was removed from the Duron Paint Manufacturing Co., across the street at 140 Ingraham st.

Both safes, found about 150 yards away near railroad tracks, had been opened with sledge hammers and pickaxes, police said.

Besides taking the money, the thieves added insult to injury by burning some of the records from each of the safes. Charred fragments of records were found alongside the Cushwa company's safe and inside the other safe. Company officials speculated that the papers were burned to provide warmth or light while the thieves finished the job.

Durwood Boeglen, general manager of the brick firm, said later it was the first time in the company's history that a large amount of money was left in the safe, which customarily contains no more than $100 at a time.

Entrance to both places was gained by breaking locks on the doors, police said.

Rucker Doubts 'Gift' of Land To Arlington County Is Legal

Arlington Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker yesterday challenged the legality of a County Board agreement to accept as a "gift" 35 acres of county land for future use as a public park.

The offer was made to the board by Washington real estate man Mark Winkler, with this condition—that the county agree to pay a $160,000 note on the property held by Winkler.

At its December 20 meeting, the board accepted the offer by a 3-2 vote.

But in a letter to board chairman Daniel A. Dugan dated yesterday, Rucker warned that a suit against the agreement "must be anticipated," and gave these reasons for his opposition:

1. The Virginia Code prohibits a county from incurring any debt "to be paid beyond its current fiscal year" unless such a debt is approved at a referendum. Rucker pointed out that the $160,000 trust, under agreemeent with Winkler, would not be paid off until December 31, 1952.

2. The county cannot assume Winkler's $160,000 trust as "a moral obligation," because "it cannot be said that paying the debt of another is a proper governmental function."

The 35 acres lie between Shirlington and Fairlington, west of Shirley hwy. Under the board's agreement with Winkler, 25 acres would be deeded to the county at once, with the remaining 10 acres turned over during a 10-year period.

Rucker called the proposed transaction "most unusual."

He wrote that the board should anticipate a suit "to prevent the county from making its first payment of interest in the transaction."

Questioned by reporters, Rucker admitted that "if it proves necessary, I will file such a suit myself."

Applications Promise to Fill Prince Georges Teacher Gap

Prince Georges County expects to overcome its teacher shortage before the new term starts next Wednesday.

G. Gardner Shugart, county school superintendent, said yesterday that enough applications have been received to avert the prospect of a "serious lack" of instructors. Recently, county school officials said 21 posts would be vacant when the new term starts.

Shugart said about 75 percent of these vacancies already have been filled with qualified personnel, an that the remainder are expected to be filled before the new term starts. All the vacancies, he said, are in white schools, and most of them are among elementary teachers.

Shugart also announced plans for a meeting, scheduled for 8 p. m. January 4, at his home in Upper Marlboro, to discuss proposals to raise the pay of the county's school teachers. Salary advances have been recommended by the County Teachers Association but no specific suggestions have been made, he said.

The meeting is to be attended by representatives of the County Board of Education, the County Teachers Association and the County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations.

"Mrs. Jeannie Scharf died . . . at . . . She was the widow of the late George Scharf, mother of George L. S., John G. and Richard J. Scharf of this city, and Mrs. G. G. Sommers, Charlotte, N. C.

"Mrs. Scharf was born in Washington on September 18, 1875, and was a true native of the District, both parents and grandparents having been born here also. She was the daughter of the late George L. Sheriff and granddaughter of the late Andrew Rothwell, both of whom were for many years highly respected and influential citizens of Washington.

"She was a direct descendent of Col. William DeWees of Pennsylvania, who in Revolutionary times was the owner of Valley Forge, which he offered and turned over to Gen. George Washington for the use of the American Army.

"Mrs. Scharf's maiden name, Jeannie Stickney Sheriff, will recall to older Washingtonians other interesting connections. After the death of her husband in 1924, Mrs. Scharf became connected with the District government, where she was recognized as an authority on records of births, deaths and adoptions. She was retired in 1943."

N. C. State, Unbeaten Navy Win Dixie Openers

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

SAY, THIS IS getting exciting—the ride-'em-cowboy race for jockey honors that little Joe Culmone and littler Willie Shoemaker are staging at horse tracks 500 miles apart. It is a year-end frenzy that is catching the conscience even of folks with a vast indifference to horse racing.

It's a wonderful sort of on-the-level contest in which a new measure of pride is the only reward of the winner, who will command no larger riding fees and can't translate his triumph into anything except personal gratification. You'd have to call it sort of refreshing.

POVICH

As this edition went to press, Culmone with 380 winners for the year was two in front of Shoemaker, with both riders crowding themselves into every race on the respective programs at Tropical Park and New Orleans. Overlooking no chances to improve their position, they'll do their Sunday riding beyond the borders of the United States where Sunday racing is legal.

Shoemaker will hie himself to Agua Caliente, in Mexico, and Culmone will take the 90-minutes flight to Cuba on Sunday, to make it a down-to-the-wire duel.

FOR THE RACING FANS who are backing their mounts it is a break. The agents of the two riders are rejecting mounts that have no solid chance to win a race. It's a different situation from when the two boys were riding merely for fees, and not necessarily insistent that they be given mounts with a honest chance to get home in front.

The winner will be recognized as the boy who rode the most winners in 1950, but it won't necessarily mean that he is the best jockey in the land. In fact, there is no contention on that point. Such as Eddie Arcaro and Ted Atkinson and a half-dozen others are conceded to be finer riders than either Shoemaker or Culmone, who were merely the busiest of the riding set in 1950.

But if they are not the best riders, they are among the best. The fact that they have each commanded more than 1600 mounts this year, an average of five a day, is evidence that their services have been in high demand. Either boy could go on to crowd such as Arcaro and Atkinson for top distinction, but at this point they haven't been in the league long enough to be truly judged.

IN THE LAST fortnight, Shoemaker has been the most consistent winner, all but wiping out what had been Culmone's eight-winner lead. Culmone was spread-eagling the field during the Maryland season, particularly at Bowie, but when he moved on to Tropical Park he encountered more riding class, didn't get the choice mounts, and slumped to an average of two winners a day.

Shoemaker and Culmone are a pair of extremes, personality-wise. Shoemaker, the Californian, is a shy, soft-spoken kid who clams up in company. In the saddle, he's ice-water, preferring to stay off the pace with his mount to the point where his backers become anxious, but obviously his moves when they are made, have been well-timed.

Young Culmone could be called a pop-off, I guess, and he likes to affect a cigar that is out of proportion to his own size. He admits he's quite a boy, and on one occasion at Bowie it got him punched in the nose by another rider. It was hushed up, but it did happen. On the track, his riding is consistent with his personality. He likes to get out in front and stay there, and the figures show he has been doing it nicely.

UNTIL A COUPLE of weeks ago, when he apparently had won his contest with Shoemaker only to suffer a spill that kept him out of action for three racing days, Culmone was shooting seriously at the all-time riding record of Walter Miller, who had brought home 388 winners in 1906. Now he has virtually abandoned that hope, with eight winners required in the final three racing days.

Even if Miller's record were surpassed, it would not be without one whopping condition. Miller was riding in the days of the walk-up start, not the stall gates of present-day racing, and it put a high premium on a boy's ability to move his mount into position at the springing of the rubber barrier. The stall gates have virtually done away with high art of getting a horse away.

However, the Culmone-Shoemaker duel is nevertheless a beaut. And as a result horse racing has horned solidly into the year-end debates, usually confined to the big bowl games. And the fact that it will be settled on Sunday outside the borders of the United States, thus going international, detracts not at all from the frenzy of it.

Wolfpack Raps Tulane, Middies Top Tar Heels

RALEIGH, N. C., Dec. 28 (AP).—Unbeaten Navy scored first and led all the way to defeat North Carolina, 60-49, tonight in an opening round game of the second annual Dixie Basketball Classic.

The Middies move into tomorrow's second round of the top division along with North Carolina State College, winner over Tulane, 89-73, and Wake Forest, which defeated Rhode Island State, 57-53.

Colgate roared back from an early 15-2 deficit to upset Duke, 84-69, in the final game.

The victory sent Colgate into the semifinals of the upper division along with North Carolina State, Wake Forest and Navy.

It was the sixth victory of the season for Navy, which was paced by Forward Pat Corrigan of Baltimore, Md., with 19 points.

N. C. State set a scoring record for the tournament in its 89-75 afternoon win over Tulane. The previous high, 61 points, was set by the Wolfpack last year.

A crowd of 10,000 saw N. C. State overcome an early 10-3 Tulane lead. At halftime the score was 44-44. The score was tied eight times in the first half and four in the second.

Forward Mel Payton led Tulane's scoring with 19 points.

In the last 14 minutes of the second half, N. C. State began pulling away from Tulane. Forward Sammy Ranzino, who scored 23 points, successively dropped in two quick field goals and one free throw to break a 54-54 tie. From there on the Wolfpack stayed out front.

Joe Scores 2d in 9th Race

Culmone Wins 2, Goes Two Up on Shoemaker

From Wire Dispatches

It took him until Tropical Park's ninth race, but Joe Culmone bagged his second winner of the day and forged two victories ahead of Willie Shoemaker yesterday.

The score in their bitterly contested duel for the Nation's riding lead now stands: Culmone, 380; Shoemaker, 378.

Culmone's second winner was Cinder Foot, a $9.10 shot. He took the fourth with Dannas Pensive, $4.50 favorite.

Shoemaker won only one race at Fair Grounds, dropping off his sizzling Wednesday pace when he won four and lost a photo that cost him a fifth victory.

In the seventh race at the New Orleans track, the wee Texan finally clicked with Roseborough ($6.60). He had two thirds in six mounts, Lillie's Best in the third and Dr. Reed in the fifth.

Culmone was out of the money with three other mounts.

Both are shooting for the all-time riding record set by Walter Miller in 1906, 388 winners.

Mikan Gets 41, But Lakers Lose, 75-67

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 28 (AP)—Emphasizing control basketball all the way, the Rochester Royals clipped the Minneapolis Lakers, 75 to 67, to strengthen their Western Division lead in the NBA tonight. The season's first sellout crowd, 4195 fans, saw the Royals annex their fifth straight win.

George Mikan poured in 41 points for the Lakers, collecting 30 in the first half, but the Royals opened a 14-point margin early in the last period.

Tri-City Pours It On Caps, 97-80

Special Dispatch to The Post

MOLINE, Ill., Dec. 28.—Washington slid deeper into the cellar of the National Basketball Association's eastern division tonight, losing their fourth game in the last six to the Tri-City Blackhawks 97-80.

The Caps were snowed under by a barage of 40 field goals by the hosts with Dike Eddleman leading the way with 10 of them. Eddleman, who punched in 14 points in a 32-point third quarter, took scoring honors for the night with 24.

Little Freddie Scolari came through with 19 points but Washington lacked a concentrated attack, the Hawks pulling away steadily from a 12-all tie in the first quarter.

Kleggie Hermsen, former Washington star in the 1948-49 season, hit four hook shots in a row in the second period to pull the hosts out to a 31-20 lead. Hermsen wund up with 13 points, while Frank Brian added 18 for the Hawks.

Fulks Lends Philly Overtime Victory

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 28 (AP).—Joe Fulks tallied the last three of his game total of 37 points in an extra period to give the Philadelphia Warriors a 91-88 victory over the Syracuse Nationals before 4000 tonight.

The triumph restored the Warriors to first place in the Eastern Division of the National Association.

Four minutes of the extra period—the fourth in four games for Philadelphia—passed without any scoring. Then Fulks hit with a jumping one-hander.

Banker Heads New Policy Board

Harvard Wants Team 'Good as Princeton'

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (NYHT).—Harvard's visiting committee on athletics, an alumni advisory group which deals with top-level football policy, has resigned en masse and will be replaced by a new group headed by George Whitney, chairman of the board of directors of J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., the New York Herald Tribune learned exclusively today.

Henry W. (Esky) Clark, former Harvard athlete and official, was head of the committee that has resigned after the two most disastrous football seasons in Harvard history.

A spokesman for the new body, whose formation is to be announced formally about January 6, characterized its theme as follows:

"We realize that football is important, but still don't want a so-called 'big-time' team; but we do want a team as good as Yale and Princeton."

His committee is expected to formulate policy that will start Harvard back on the road towards football success. Exactly how this is to be achieved hasn't been made clear, but it could mean considerably more alumni and school aid to football.

In trying to achieve footbal equality with Yale and Princeton, the new committee is aiming high in terms of recent results.

In 1950, Princeton was undefeated and untied in nine games and generally regarded as one of the country's strongest teams.

Yale won six of its nine games, losing only to Princeton by more than one touchdown.

Harvard, on the other hand, has lost eight out of nine games in each of the last two seasons. In 1949 it defeated only Holy Cross, 22 to 14, lost to Princeton, 33 to 13, and to Yale, 29 to 6. In 1950, the Crimson won only from Brown, 14 to 13, lost to Princeton, 63 to 26 and to Yale, 14 to 6.

Harvard's football policy first received nationwide attention just a year ago, when Athletic Director William J. Bingham was quoted as saying "we are not to compete intersectionally. We are going to stick to the Ivy League and we can't compete with Pennsylvania's State scholarships, we'll stay in our own class, and 'big time' football is out."

Paul H. Buck, provost of the university, immediately characterized Bingham's remarks as "premature," and Harold E. Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania, defended his school from any implications of impropriety in athletic program.

Harvard's Alumni Bulletin supported Bingham. Then, in February, Head Football Coach Arthur Valpey resigned although his contract had another year to run, and accepted a similar position at the University of Connecticut.

Uninterested, Says Cherry on Redskins Job

Blair Cherry, yesterday's "leading possibility" to succeed Herman Ball, who hasn't quit or been fired yet as coach of the Redskins, said "I am certainly not interested," according to the Associated Press.

Cherry, who recently quit as coach of Texas, was mentioned by a Milwaukee sports writer who said Harry Wismer had discussed the job with Cherry. Wismer, a sports radio and TV announcer, also owns a few shares of Redskins stock.

Cherry, speaking from Dallas where he's preparing Texas for the Cotton Bowl game, said he had not received any offer to coach the Redskins "and am certainly not interested."

Ted Rogers Upset In Orange Bowl Tennis Tourney

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Dec. 28 (AP).—Two upsets in the junior boys division (18 years old and under) marked play today in quarter finals of annual Orange Bowl Junior Tennis Tournament.

Reynaldo Garrido of Havana, Cuba, eliminated Inman Fox, Southern champion from Nashville, Tenn., in three sets, 6—8, 6—4, 6—4. Sixth-seeded Fred Bill of Miami eliminated second-seeded Ted Rogers of Chevy Chase, Md., 6—3, 4—6, 6—4. Bill played a steady game and kept putting them back to the Chevy Chase netter.

Veteran Manager Laments

. . . And Lights Dim for Small Boxing Clubs

By Murray Rose

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 (AP).—The lights had dimmed and all was quiet in the huge arena as you headed toward the exit. An hour before the crowd had howled and the air had been electric as it always is when two name fighters are battling for the big money.

You passed under the marquee and the lights blinked out. The man with you had been quiet as he walked with you. And now as you hit the avenue he started to talk. And his mood was bitter.

"I've been managing fighters for 27 years and now it's the worst yet," he started. "Sure, okay for those two guys. They got theirs and more power to them. About 10 grand apiece and the $2250 each for television. Sure, let 'em have it. They deserve it and so do all the fighters.

"But look what's happenin'. Those two guys go on and all around the country they watch 'em. What happens to the fight clubs around the country that day? They don't go on no more. How you gonna compete with two name fighters who go on for free? So watta you got? Just a couple of clubs goin'? Where you gonna get the fighters next year?

"All right, so that's only Friday night. That wouldn't be so bad. You can't stop progress. So if they put on the T. V. across the country one night a week, you could charge it up to promotion. Maybe you're gonna make more fight fans.

"But now they put the T. V. on the cables Wednesday too. That's too much. How many fights can the average fan take; he gets the big guys for free now Wednesdays and Fridays. His wife tells the fan, 'That's enough. You don't have to go to no other joints. Stay home with the kids.'

"So whatta you got? You got only a couple small clubs goin' where you had a dozen in the city. New Jersey? Used to be the hotbed of boxin'. Now there's nothin' there. T. V. has done to boxing what it did to baseball in Newark and Jersey City. If a live boxer showed up in Jersey City they'd stuff him in a museum.

"The small club is the cradle of boxin.' You develop the fighters there for the big time. Now you get a kid with maybe 15 or 20 fights and shove him in a main bout when he should be learnin' his trade in six rounders. He ain't ready but T. V. needs main go fighters.

"Once you could bring a kid along in the small clubs. You developed neighborhood rivalries. The kids would get big followings in their neighborhood. And each kid on the card would bring a couple of hundred fans from his block no matter where he fights. So the clubs did good business and the kids got a chance to learn. Everybody made a little money and you brought up good fighters for the the Garden.

"Now what happens? You got a kid who is pretty good. He comes, say, from 66th st. Once the whole block would show up to see him fight. Now the fan don't go out and see some jerk kids from down the block fight. He's used to seein' Rocky Graziano, Ezzard Charles, Joe Louis, Ike Williams, Ray Robinson, Paddy Young and all those topnotchers. And for free. So he don't go no more. Neither does anyone else. That ain't only here. Check the fight clubs around the country. Those that are operatin' are grossin' maybe a thousand, sometimes 800, and often only a half a grand.

Twenty-seven years a manager and now I gotta close shop soon. The bankroll ain't there anymore and I can't keep those kids in trainin' anymore.

"I got a swell kid workin' a while. Good punch, smart, and he wants to fight. But what can I get him? So I tell him 'Kid, you go get that clerk job for 50 bucks. Stay the hell away from the gym and don't let me see you any more.' It almost broke my heart."

Hoyas Defeat Notre Dame— On TV Show, 2-1

Georgetown defeated Notre Dame last night, 2-1.

It wasn't in basketball—just on a television show. Nonetheless, three of the Hoya court stars wound up with two of the dolls on Arlene Francis' "Blind-Date" program on WMAL-TV.

Competing were Hugh Beins, Jack Hekker and Bill Bolger. We heard it about in a telegram from Chicago from Publicity Man Bill Rach. As usual, Rach neglected to tell us who lost. ABC in New York thinks it was Bolger.

Culmone Definitely Will Go to Havana

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 28 (U.P.)—Jockey Joe Culmone said tonight he has definitely decided to fly to Havana Sunday in an effort to cinch his short lead over Willie Shoemaker for the national riding championship.

Earlier this week Culmone said he would wait until Friday to decide on a Cuban junket. But when queried tonight, he said, "Sure, I'm going."

Shoemaker was expected to fly to Tia Juana, Mexico, Sunday to compete at Agua Caliente. Culmone is afraid that the 14 races on the card there will give Wee Willie a chance to overhaul him. The Havana course has an eight-race program.

Ky., Bradley Tourney Favorites

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 28 (AP).—Bradley and Kentucky—the Nation's two top basketball teams—are favored to win tomorrow night's opening round Sugar Bowl games and meet in the game-of-the-season Saturday.

But for the dream to materialize, Kentucky must eliminate an always-though St. Louis five and Bradley must dispose of Syracuse, a potential upsetter.

GRANVILLE, Ohio, Dec. 28 (AP).—Denison University's previously unimpressive basketball team burst forth with a startling upset victory tonight over Harvard 55-46. It was Harvard's fifth loss in seven games.

New Rockfish Limit Urged For Maryland

By Ralph Murdock

HERE ARE SOME proposals which were favorably considered by the Maryland Tidewater Committee at a recent meeting in Annapolis, Md., and should be of particular concern to our local angling fraternity.

Murdock

The committee was composed of various Statewide organizations having an interest in Tidewater problems and the subject under discussion was the striped bass situation in this area.

The proposals:

1. Allow sport fishermen to retain one rockfish a day over 15 pounds—which is the present limit.

2. Further restrict haul seines.

3. Licensing, at a small fee, all party boats operating on the Chesapeake Bay.

4. Recommend further consideration by State authorities on the striped bass situation in the Potomac River and possibly an attempt to rescind the old compact law adopted in 1785.

Naturally, the bulk of interest centers around the first two proposals. As it now stands very few fishermen are inclined to return an oversized striper to the water. They simply hate to part with those big fellows once they have gotten them in their boat. For some anglers it could be "once in a lifetime."

EVERY ANGLER is thoroughly convinced that the haul seines are a menace to sport fishing—the last two hardhead seasons are factual evidence.

It's our opinion that the present laws for enforcement are inadequate. Curtailment of seining hours, shorter nets, restricted areas (particularly in the small rivers which empty into the bay) and more rigid fines for violators would certainly help—if fishing for fun is to survive.

Miller Rides Again, Victor Pays $6.60

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 28.—Local fans finally got around to making J. K. Wynkoop's Excel the favorite and the four-year-old made good to the tune of a $6.60 mutuel in the featured Leesburg Purse.

The Hagerstown, Md., owned chestnut made it three victories in a row over this track, all under the handling of Jockey Willie Miller. Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman's Boston Hero was second with H. N. Warren's Annie's Dream third.

Excel, making his fifth start of the meeting, four in the role of an outsider, was clocked in 1:45 4/5 for the mile and one-sixteenth over a fast track. The time was only the fraction over the track record held by Boston Man.

The day was not a big success, however, for the backers of public choices. Installed as odds-on choices, two of the best-known horses on the grounds met defeat. They were Mrs. Mildred Robinson's Regalon, three-time winner here, and S. H. Rogers' Blue Rocket.

Regalon set the early pace in the fourth race and then faded to be out of the money as Mrs. Arthur White's Slam Bid shocked the talent by winning at $20.40

Blue Rocket was outrun surprisingly by the Hopeful Stud's Example in the fifth event. Both were forced back in the stretch run as the Paul Stable's Dark Buckle came on to win at $10.80 while pushed along by R. L. Belenger.

Blue Rocket and Example got in a slight tangle midway of the stretch and Vernon Bush, aboard the favorite, was found guilty of rough riding and was fined $50 by the stewards.

Annie's Dream set most of the pace in the day's reature but Boston Man and Excel finally moved to the leader. In the final drive, Miller went to work on Excel and the Sun Again gelding drew out to win by a length and three quarters.

A pair of fairly-well backed horses figured in producing a $57.20 payoff on the daily double combination of 1 and 8. Diamond Head, owned and saddled by H. C. Allnut of Rockville, took the first at $9.40 while handled by Apprentice C. M. Martinez. Bush brought George Moray's Lt. Bud home in the second, the 6-year-old paying $12.20.

Apprentice Hartley Hurt Working Horse

CHARLES TOWN, Dec. 28. Darrell Hartley, one of the year's best apprentices, was injured in a training accident this morning. He suffered face lacerations and a possible fractured cheekbone and is remaining at the Charles Town Hospital for X-rays.

A horse he was working bolted into the fence and threw the young Canadian rider, who was leading apprentice here and at the Bowie meeting.

Army Lightheavy Favorite Is Beaten

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

FORT MEADE, Md., Dec. 28.—The Army opened its 1951 boxing tournament here today with a 45-bout marathon that lasted until midnight, and saw the light heavyweight chapmion favorite beaten in his first fight.

Alea Williams, Fort Sheridan, Ill., Pfc., outpointed Fagans in a whirlwind bout that had the 1000 soldier spectators standing and cheering.

Fagans, 1948 and '49 champ, was trying to regain the title won from him last year by Jasper Colson of the Military District of Washington. Colson was unable to defend this year, having been wounded last month in Korea.

In winning the title in 1949, Fagans beat Williams in the finals. Tonight the vengeful Williams was outpunched by the muscular Fagans only in the first round. His second round hooks took the starch out of Fagans. The last 30 seconds of the third round saw Fagans standing arms down, taking 30 straight punches without a return.

Three defending champions, Bantamweight Pete Garabito, a former University of Maryland student, Lightweight Bob Bickle and Middleweight Lawrence Jones, a Washington, D. C., boy, had smooth sailing.

The MDW had a rough time, however, being all but swept out of competition. Only Light-heavyweight Bob Graves of Fort Belvoir survived the first round out of six area standard bearers.

The pudgy 205-pounder from Kewanee, Ill., stopped Al Tillman of the Alaska Command in one minute and nine seconds. A powerful right to the jaw knocked Tillman unconscious, and he lay on the canvas two minutes before stirring.

In tomorrow night's semi-finals here at 7 p. m. the Second Army, last year's runnersup team, placed six men. The Third Army, last year's champ, and the Fifth Army coached by former lightweight king Lew Jenkins, each placed five.

Europe placed four, the First and Sixth Army each had three, the Caribbean and Fourth Army two, and Alaska and M. D. W. one. The Far Eastern Command did not participate because of the Korean situation.

Gene Smith, Keene on West Show

Washington's two brightest young ring hopefuls, featherweight Gene Smith and lightheavyweight Julian Keene, were added to the Sonny Boy West benefit boxing card at Uline Arena next Thursday night.

Smith, undefeated in 22 pro bouts, meets Bobby Bell of Youngstown, Ohio, in one eight-rounder.

Keene, the District's lightheavy champ, tackles Johnny Pratt, former All-Army middleweight champ, and a kayo artist, in another eight.

In the feature, Percy Bassett of Philadelphia faces Ted (Red Top) Davis of Hartford. All profits of the show will go to the family of Sonny Boy West, who died in New York last week, 22 hours after being knocked out by Bassett.

This will be Smith's first home appearance in three months. Since he was last here, Gene shed one of his two managers. Billy Banks, and has taken on Irving Cohen, who also manages Rocky Graziano. Bobby Brown is Smith's other pilot.

Smith's biggest victcry to date was a knockout of rugged Little Dynamite, recent conqueror of Washington featherweight champ, Jimmy Cooper. Smith has won 16 of his 22 fights by kayoes.

Bell, his opponent, is 22. Last summer, he lost a tough decision to Willie Pep.

Keene, a lanky youngster, stopped Roland Randall last spring to win the local title. Since then, he knocked out Chief Red Arrow of Oklahoma, the only man to beat him in two years, and Leroy Coleman, New York club fighter.

Pratt's last performance was a knockout of Art Bethea, who had outpointed him only two weeks before. Pratt also stopped Eddie Marshall, last year's Golden Gloves champ, after Marshall had run up a string of four kayoes.

As Twin Oaks, Takoma Win

Recreation Tourney Provides Drama as Well as Good Play

You don't have to go to Madison Square Garden or the other big arenas for your basketball drama.

Just think of the action, joy and bitter disappointment packed in 140 games for all ages and sizes in the D. C. Recreation Department Christmas tournament.

Was it good? That's why Twin Oaks won.

There's the other side, too. In a senior girls' semifinal, Takoma defeated Buchanan, 36-35. Takoma's Carol Davis tallied 22 points to add to her 20 and 35-point performances in other tourney tests.

A lot of similar incidents are contained in the agate type scores below:

Washington's professional All-Stars led by former Caps' Dick O'Keefe and Earl Lloyd turned back the American League Champion Scranton Miners, 79-71, before 350 persons last night at Uline Arena.

O'Keefe and Lloyd scored 19 and 17 points respectively as the All-Stars won despite the activity of Big Ray Elleffson, former New York Knickerbrocker ace, who tallied 25 points for the invaders sinking 11 for 13 from the foul stripe.

The All-Stars held a three point lead at halftime, 40-37, and moved away to a 10-point lead at the end of the third quarter as William "Sugar" Cain, Bob Lamon and Johnny Norlander sent seven shots through the hoops for 14 points.

Bill Merleman's field goal with 15 seconds remaining in an overtime period gave the Merrick Boys Club a 34-33 victory over the D. C. Skaters in the second game of the night.

Duquesne Wins 8th

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 28 (AP).—Duquesne University racked up its eighth straight win tonight, defeating Detroit University, 60-52, in a basketball game before 3900 fans at the Gardens.

Bill Bennings Says:

AT CHARLES TOWN

DEAR FOLKS:

Bill Bell, a local boy who quit as a jockey agent to become a trainer, has saddled 44 winners this year for the Wynkoop Stable and others. He leaves for Sunshine Park at Tampa Sunday with 10 horses in his charge. By the way, Dan Chamblin, of Leesburg, Va., who has saddled more winners here than any other conditioner in the track's history, tops trainers at this meeting with seven winners. Barring more precipitation, the roads from Baltimore and Washington are in excellent condition. Agent Andy Fimman will handle booking for jockeys Bill Miller and Vernon Bush during the Florida season. Former jockey Beverley Hacker says he will sell his horses and take a job in a Baltimore defense plant. See you on the rail—BILL.

Hotel-Office Firm Reports Net Increase

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Properties, Inc., yesterday reported net income of $362,721 for the fiscal year ended October 31, compared with $320,787 in the preceding year.

President Frank E. Weakly emphasized that the net is before allowance for depreciation, and less write-off of property replacements and additions.

The corporation owns and operates the Wardman Park and Carlton hotels, as well as an apartment house at 2700 Connecticut ave. and an office building at 1001 Vermont ave.

In his annual report to stockholders, Weakly said that gross income totaled $4,291,551 for the latest year, against $4,178,171 in the previous 12 months' business, he said, picked up sufficiently in the last six months to more than offset a decline in the first half.

He also noted that a tax controversy has been settled with the payment of additional taxes of $230,409, plus interest, for all Federal tax liability through the fiscal year ended October 31, 1949. Of this amount, all but about $37,000 had bee nprovided for in prior years.

"With this Federal tax liability resolved," Weakly declared, "the company has been able to take advantage of the terms of the first mortgage bond indenture and accelerate the principal payments to the extent of $350,000. With the payment due February 1, 1951, the principal amount of the bonds outstanding on that date will be reduced to $4,238,000. Thereupon, future interest on the mortgage indebtedness will be automatically reduced to 3½ percent a year . . ."

IMPROVEMENT: Southern Railway reported November net income of $2,370,643, against $1,699,471 in the same 1949 month. For the 11 months of 1950, net amounted to $17,237,910, compared with $9,236,734 in the corresponding period last year.

One On the Aisle

A Rave From 'Rosy' For Our Symphony

By Richard L. Coe

ABOUT THE TOWN: John Rosenfield, the Dallas News Reviewer who put the Southwest on the cultural map, at the Statler, between a visit to his son at Camp Pickett and a speech to the current American Educational Theater Association convention in New York . . . "Rosy" begins talking with a rave for Howard Mitchell and the National Symphony: "It used to be a second-rate orchestra; now it's absolutely first class," the which he wired his paper after Wednesday night's concert . . . This is high praise from the man who promoted the Dallas Symphony, Margo Jones' highly-regarded arena theater, the Dallas Little Theater and the Civic Playhouse . . . Last night the Rosenfields were in the Gayety audience for "Apple of His Eye," wherein are three of Margo's veterans, Frances Waller, George Mitchell and Katharine Squire . . . "Rosy's" on the ANTA board and yesterday afternoon had the kick of going to a White House press conference.

MELVIN HILDRETH provides a springtime item: The Circus will be here May 17, 18 and 19, the last date being the sixty-sixth birthday of the James E. Cooper Top, which evolved through the years into Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey . . . Three of this column's "best Hollywood pictures" of the year current downtown: "All about Eve," at the National, "King Solomon's Mines," at the Columbia, and "Harvey" at Keith's, and a topper of the foreign field, "Trio," still at the Playhouse . . . Noticed the signs at the Metropolitan: "Who Has More Glamor?" . . . Refers to the new double bill of Jean Harlow in "The Platinum Blonde" and Rita Hayworth in "Gilda." . . . Jean's my winner.

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN McSWEENEY (D., Ohio) writes: "I earnestly hope that your appraisal of 'Apple of His Eye' won't keep others from seeing it" . . . The gentleman from Wooster, where he once taught in the high school, is evidently another early morning writer and carefully uses ordinary stamps on his mail as seems to be the custom with franking-privileged officials who write the reviewers; carefully over his official seal he wrote, "This letter is stamped," and it was . . . As to the Congressman's reaction to my own of the Gayet's play, I'm sorry he felt I was looking down on "attractive girls with fine characters who accept humble service when no other outlet is available to help their families" . . . That wasn't my intent, sir, but I hope your Ohio constituents and their Hoosier neighbors will agree with you and thanks for writing.

CHARLES PURCELL, who sang his way into thousands of hearts in "Dearest Enemy," "Ziegfeld Follies" and half a dozen productions of "The Chocolate Soldier," is setting up shop here as a teacher with his wife, Opera's Elizabeth Valdes . . . Half a week the Purcells will be at their local "Studio of the Theater," 1523 New Hampshire ave., the other half at their New York studio in Steinway Hall, where they've been teaching about a year . . . Purcell's gray now, but he's the same 145 he used to be opposite the lovely Helen Ford in shows that made musical comedy history . . . His school's number is HObart 2118.

THE DISTRICT policewoman who censors the town's censorable entertainment gives a clean bill of health to her version of "International Burlesque," which comes back to the Pix today with its previous sidekick, "Argentine Nights" . . . Good News: The National will hold "All About Eve" two extra days, which means through Monday . . . The Georgetown Theater this afternoon hosts the G. W. Players, whose next is Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," which happens to be the day's attraction . . . The Plaza will hold its triple-threat ballet program a second week.

NEW YEAR'S EVE is on a lot of minds . . . The Warner chain is having midnight shows virtually all over the map and a special deal is on for Saturday night at both the Warner and the Metropolitan, where 'twill be possible to see "Let's Dance" at 7 and 11 and the incoming "Dallas" at both 9:10 and 12:50 . . . Also on Warner listings are special children's showings Saturday morning at the Calbert, Avalon, Silver, Kennedy, Colony, Takoma, Tivoli, Penn, York and Uptown.

LAURETTE LUEZ, who could half-accurately be described as Errol Flynn's latest girl friend, since she plays just that in the incoming "Kim," will be a Saturday visitor, trekking her native land for Metro after growing up in the Orient . . . The Atlas food matinee this morning at 10:30 will be turning over its admission tokens, canned goods or food products, to the area's police captain for distribution to the needy . . . Debbie Reynolds and Carleton Carpenter, the lively songsmiths of "Two Weeks With Love," due in by air from the Coast tonight. . . . Bill Gandall of Stanley Kramer's New York's office into bandy adjectives about Jose Ferrer's "Cyrano de Bergerac," bound for the Playhouse.

ADD MIDNIGHT SUNDAY: "Oh! Amelia," a tres French comedy which brings back Danielle Darrieux, will have a special showing New Year's Eve midnight at the Plaza, where it will be back for a run once the "Hamlet" revival ("popular prices") has had it . . . The Hiser-Bethesda will be reopening its doors at 11:30 for the Reynolds-Carpenter's "Two Weeks With Love." . . . That night Connie Gay's Grand Old Opry opens the Armory at 9 . . . Horton Foote, of the late Productions, Inc., seems to have sold Gary Cooper on making his Broadway stage bow in his western-sans-hosses, "The Chase," which means a special midnight toast.

MAURICE SCHWARTZ, the distinguished Yiddish actor who has just completed a Hollywood role in "Bird of Paradise," will be along at the Gayety for two performances Sunday, January 7 . . . He'll be acting with his own company in "Riverside Drive," which Leon Korbin shrewdly wrote in both Yiddish and England, a fact to delight those who don't understand the former but will enjoy the skill of Schwartz . . . Joan Blondell will be partied by Baltimore's new arena type theater at the Sheraton Belvedere, "Hilltop Theater-in-the-Round," which Joan will open with "Happy Birthday" January 8.

MARLENE DIETRICH comes back in "The Blue Angel" at the Trans-Lux today; this is the UFA picture which put Marlene on the map 20 years ago . . . Josef von Sternberg directed with Emil Jannings as the top star; yes, there are English subtitles.

THIS AFTERNOON finds the Washington School of the Ballet and the National Symphony linking forces for a special production of "Hansel and Gretel," in Constitution Hall at 3 . . . Howard Mitchell will conduct, with Lisa Gardiner as narrator and Mary Day as that wicked witch.

HER CLASSIC POSE: Marlene Dietrich's assured behavior in "The Blue Angel" made this pose one of the most inmitated of our times. The Trans-Lux brings back the film, a 20-year-old German UFA release, with English subtitles, for a run starting this morning

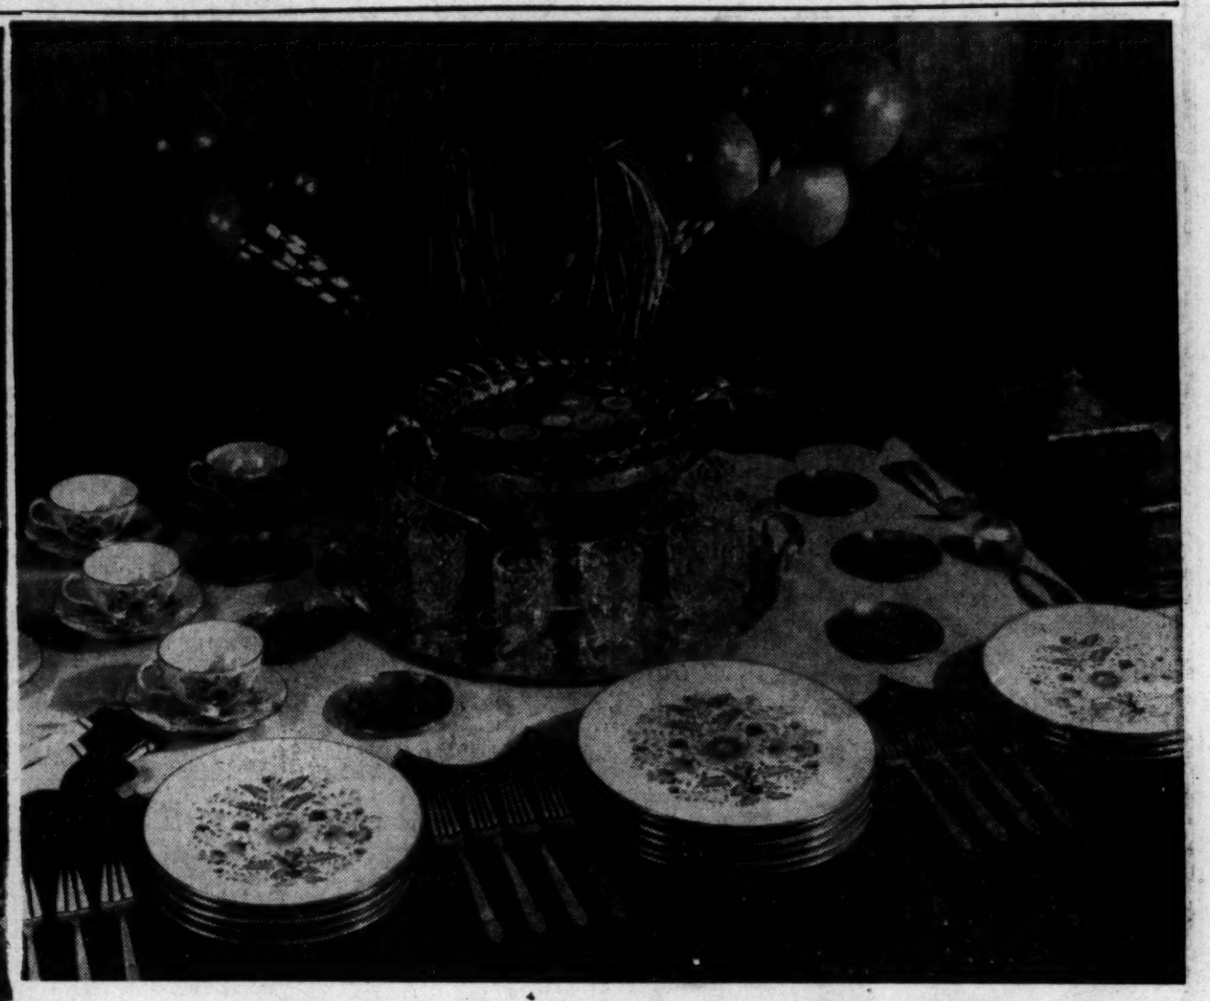
FRIDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1950

LET 'EM EAT CAKE on New Year's Eve, and let the cakes sing out a joyful message. Top the cup cakes with Snowflake Icing (see accompanying recipe) and draw a letter or number on each cake with melted chocolate. Arrange them on a plate or tray so that they'll greet your guests in appropriate fashion when the time comes to serve dessert. Offer them along with gay red cranberry sherbet, a tart-flavored favorite that will contrast nicely with the sweet white cakes



TOAST FOR '51: Serve punch from a gala table, decked out with your best china and glass and decorated with balloons and colorful horns

Tasty Buffet Starts the Year Right

By Lucia Brown

FAREWELL, OLD MAN '50, and hail Young '51! Whatever you bring with you, we'll greet you with a rollicking salute!

Bells will ring and people sing. Horns will be blown and toasts tossed. December 31 is a night for gayety and light-heartedness, a good night to gather close friends about you for a gala buffet supper.

THE FOLLOWING MENU is planned so that you can get most of the details out of the way long before the first guest rings the bell. Bake the ham and serve it cold. Make salads and have them ready in the refrigerator. Prepare the casserole for last-minute popping into the oven. Ditto for the cheese biscuit. Have cakes ready in the cupboard and the sherbet in the freezing compartment. And get your husband to mix the champagne punch!

NEW YEAR'S EVE BUFFET

Champagne Punch
Baked Ham with Apricot Glaze
Oyster and Mushroom Casserole
Molded Potato Salad
Tossed Green Salad
Olives Celery Radishes
Pimento Cheese Biscuit
Cranberry Ice
New Year's Cake Coffee

APRICOT GLAZE

3/4 pound dried apricots
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3/4 cup water
1/3 cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch

Soak apricots over night, then boil until puffy and tender and strain through a fine sieve. Add all other ingredients but cornstarch and cook over brisk heat for five minutes, stirring constantly. Add 1 tablespoon cornstarch, dissolved in a little water, and continue cooking a minute or two.

Put lukewarm, skinned baked ham in a shallow pan. Carefully coat it with as much of the apricot glaze as will stick. Put it in a 400-degree oven until glaze has set. Don't let it brown. Take it out and coat again with glaze and return to oven. Keep this up until all the glaze is used or until the ham is completely coated—except on the bottom! Cool and keep in refrigerator or other cold place until ready for use.

OYSTER AND MUSHROOM CASSEROLE

1 quart oysters
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 pound mushrooms
6 tablespoons flour
3 cups top milk or cream and oyster liquor
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg (optional)
2 tablespoons cooking sherry
1 cup bread crumbs, buttered

Drain oysters. Melt 1/4 cup butter in saucepan. Add mushrooms and saute in butter for three minutes. Remove mushrooms from saucepan. Melt remainder of butter in same pan. Add flour and stir over low heat until blended.

Stir in the milk and oyster liquor slowly. Stir and cook until sauce is thick and boiling. Add mushrooms and bring the sauce to the boiling point. Add drained oysters. Fold the sauce over the oysters, being careful that it does not burn on the bottom. Add salt, paprika, nutmeg and sherry.

Pour into baking dish and scatter bread crumbs over top. Dot with butter. Shortly before serving, place in oven until dish is thoroughly heated through and crumbs are brown on top. Serves 12 persons.

PIMIENTO CHEESE BISCUIT

2 cups biscuit mix
3/4 cup milk
3 ounces (1 package) pimiento cream cheese
3 tablespoons butter or margarine

Combine milk and biscuit mix to make soft dough. Beat 1 minute. Pat dough 1/2-inch thick and cut with small cutter. Place in baking pan. Top each biscuit with a spoonful of a mixture of the cream cheese and creamed butter. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) 10 to 12 minutes. Serve piping hot

SNOWFLAKE ICING

(for New Year's Cakes)

2 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup sweetened condensed milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 1/2 cups sifted confectioner's sugar

Cream butter. Blend in half of sweetened condensed milk. Stir in vanilla. Gradually beat in sugar, alternating with remaining sweetened condensed milk. Frosting will be of thin, spreading constistency. There will be about 1 1/4 cups of frosting.

CRANBERRY ICE

2 1-pound cans jellied cranberry sauce
Juice of 2 oranges
Grated rind of 2 lemons
4 egg whites

Put cranberry sauce through coarse sieve. Add orange juice and grated lemon. Pour into two refrigerator trays and freeze until almost firm. Scrape frozen mixture into chilled bowl. Beat quickly with rotary beater. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Return to freezing trays and freeze until firm. Makes enough to serve 12.

Not So Easy for Green Amateur to Hang Fabric On Wall, But Can Be Done

DEAR ANNE:

Can fabric be successfully applied to a wall by an amateur? Please advise what type of glue or paste should be used, as well as any special pointers to be followed.

Mrs. H. D. Friedman, 1909 Redwood ter. nw.

This is a difficult, but not impossible, job for the unpracticed. Ordinary wallpaper paste can be used. Add to it, however, one of the special preparations sold for mixing with paste to increase its "stickability."

Be sure material is preshrunk, and be careful not to get fabric too sopping wet in applying. It's generally a good idea to trim off selvages as they may contribute to warping of fabric on wall. Edges can be lapped and pasted down, one on top of the other, where they meet.

Another way of applying fabric to a wall sidesteps pasting problems. You sew the lengths of material together, then stretch them over the walls, securing at top and bottom with a thin wooden lath and tacks. This has the advantage of making it possible to remove the material and clean or launder it from time to time.

Best fabrics for wall application are chintz, cretonne, linen, canvas, burlap or gingham. Fabrics coated with synthetic materials are also used. Heavy brocade is lovely in formal rooms, but silks and rayons generally are too difficult to apply directly to the wall.

DEAR ANNE:

Have you a recipe for doughnuts made with mashed potatoes? I understand that they have an unusually nice texture.

W. E., Washington.

POTATO DOUGHNUTS

6 cups sifted enriched flour
7 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
3 eggs, beaten
2 cups sugar
1½ cups warm mashed potatoes
6 tablespoons melted lard
¾ cup milk
Lard for deep-fat frying.

Sift flour with baking powder, salt and nutmeg. Combine eggs, sugar, potatoes and lard. Continue beating. Add milk and blend. Add dry ingredients, and mix only until flour disappears. Chill.

Place about a third of the dough at a time on a lightly floured cloth or board. Sprinkle surface of dough lightly with flour and roll to ½-inch thickness. Cut with floured doughnut cutter. Fry in hot deep lard (360 degrees Fahrenheit) until golden brown. Drain. Roll in granulated or confectioner's sugar if desired. This makes four dozen doughnuts.

'Good Old Days' Doesn't Apply to Baby Food

By Lucille Shearwood
For Gerber's Baby Foods

THESE ARE good times for babies. The ambitious stork is making a safer journey each year, maternal mortality is down to a new low and baby has graduated from that milk-and-gruel diet of the "good old days."

In fact, babies today are basking in a variety menu long before they can talk. Some 50 varieties of strained and junior foods are scientifically grown and prepared for their well-being by a small army of farmers, agricultural and laboratory specialists, technicians, research experts and other highly-trained food folks. Thriving baby may not be able to name it, but he does eat it, as proved by the 173-million-dollar baby foods industry.

Soaring birth rates and fast-climbing demand for ready-to-use foods have prompted several leading food packers to put out a line of baby foods. However, one firm, Gerber's, caters exclusively to babies, and little jars wearing the come-hither baby trademark are prominent on grocery shelves across the country. In fact, Gerber's pioneered in stocking baby foods on those shelves in 1928.

AS MANY MOTHERS know, a woman's idea was behind the early development of Gerber's Baby Foods. It was Mrs. Dan Gerber who started it all by wanting a few fresh vegetables strained at her husband's canning plant for her baby, Sally. From that simple beginning, the lives of millions of women have been made easier.

Mothers today can choose from a year-round variety menu and surprisingly are able to buy baby foods at about half the price paid 22 years ago. The introductory assortment of five original products, offered from Freemont, Mich., at $1, represented a $1.10 value in baby foods. Now, in the face of climbing food costs, some two dozen strained foods are on retail shelves at about 10 cents a jar.

In those modest early days, all of the crops were grown within an hour or two of one plant. Now the feeding of babies and toddlers requires Gerber plants from Oakland, Calif., to Rochester, N. Y., to insure year-round supplies of sun-ripened apricots, carrots, peaches, sweet potatoes, apples and all the other harvests, regardless of crop failures or perverse weather.

LOGICALLY, a growing percentage of women is identified with this important business of catering to America's Gerber babies. As a busy mother of five, Mrs. Gerber wisely restricted her participation to suggestions drawn from her own experience, keeping out of actual plant operation. Then, too, she attracted a wide mother-correspondence, which she continued to answer personally until it reached astronomical proportions.

Make a trip through one of the humming Gerber plants and you'll be impressed by the number of women and the variety of their jobs. Whether it's apricot time at Oakland, peach season at Michigan, or apple month at Rochester, you'll find women in key jobs, intent on making good baby foods even better.

In the laboratories, white-clad girls are peering into microscopes and test tubes; they are checking quality control along belt lines. Women are engaged in many forms of nutrition research; they direct the growing reference library; edit the house-organ; hold direct mail and office posts and of course work in actual plant operation.

CONSUMERS ARE served also through a modern test kitchen at the Michigan headquarters, ably directed by Edna Mae McIntosh, nutritionist and Sylvia Ritter, home economist. Interesting new uses of baby foods for toddlers and their elders are worked out here and taste-tested by willing volunteers. Visiting and resident nursing service is another women's department, as is the cafeteria. Even tiny babies get in their mature judgment on additions to their menu, for a Consumer Panel of mothers and babies passes on new Gerber products.

Gray Hair Looks Well—On Others

By Ann Lawrence
(Second Day of Agnes' Beauty Program.)

AGNES approached the job of tinting her hair with a lot more than just a shadow of doubt. She was willing to be improved but another color of hair hadn't exactly come into her mind when she first told us about herself.

We convinced her finally that while gray hair can be attractive, the many strands she had growing out from the crown of her head did nothing for her except to made her hair look dead and dull. So it was decided that an auburn shade would not only hide them, but the color would brighten the rest of her brown locks without being garish.

First Agnes mixed the contents of the two bottles in the kit in a glass bowl. One bottle contains the tint, the other a color releaser. Then with a regular paint brush, she brushed the mixture onto her hair along a series of separate partings, working from the crown to the forehead for the front part. The back hair was treated in reverse.

To All A Happy New Year

More Buds for the Debutante Bouquet

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

NEW BUDS were added last evening to this year's bouquet of debutantes. Miss Elizabeth Cortright Wetherill and Miss Molly Holden were introduced at dances, attended by older friends as well as young. At the same time, the sub-deb group had its share of gayety at the annual Christmas Assembly dinner dance held at the Sulgrave.

MISS Molly Holden made her bow yesterday in a gown of white tulle. She was presented by her father, Dr. Raymond T. Holden, at a tea dance at the Chevy Chase Club between the hours of 5 and 7 p. m. The white ballroom was gay with Christmas decorations and Sidney's orchestra furnished the music for dancing.

The debutante's frock was fashioned short in front and ankle length in back. A tucked bodice was made with off-shoulder bands of tulle, and a full skirt had layers of tulle, two in white, one in yellow and one in blue, all over a slip of white taffeta. Pastel roses fastened at the waist trailed one side of the skirt.

Miss Holden was graduated last year from the Convent of the Sacred Heart, and she is now in her first year at Bryn Mawr. Present at her debut yesterday were her grandmother, Mrs. Raymond T. Holden, her aunt, Miss Daisy Moritz, and her uncle, William Holden. Cousins from Boston, Frederick Murphy and Richard Murphy, were also guests.

Other guests from out of town included Miss Barbara Maude and Miss Peggy Merrick of Baltimore, Robert Casey of Scranton, Pa., and John Troxell of Philadelphia.

After seven, Miss Holden and many of her young friends went on to the dinner dance at the Carlton for Miss Elizabeth Wetherill.

DEB DOINGS:

MISS Elizabeth Cortright Wetherill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Convers Wetherill stepped into the debutante spotlight last night at a dinner dance given by her parents at the Carlton Hotel.

Glogau
MISS MOLLY HOLDEN

First the debutante and guests assembled in the North Lounge for cocktails, Mrs. Wetherill receiving with her daughter. Miss Wetherill's gown was of stiff gold brocade, the material brought from Damascus by her uncle, George Clark. Made with an off-shoulder bodice, the frock had a full skirt with inserts of gold taffeta. She wore yellow orchids.

Mrs. Wetherill's gown was of black lace and a spray of purple orchids were pinned to her shoulder.

The 100 guests, which included this season's debutantes and their beaux, were seated at small poinsettia-decorated tables in the Congo room for dinner. Hostesses at the various tables were Miss Wetherill, Miss Eleanor Tydings, Miss Jan King, Miss Molly Holden, Miss Barbara Cranston, Miss Sally Alexander and Miss Margaret Wall Hines. Miss Margaret Wetherill, subdeb sister of last night's debutante, was also there.

Miss Wetherill, who's a student at George Washington and a pledge to Pi Beta Phi Sorority, attended the Warrenton Country School, Holton-Arms, and was graduated from St. Mary's Seminary Junior College.

LADY MONTCRIEFFE of London was the guest in whose honor the Ambassador of Greece, Athanase Politis, entertained last evening at a dinner at the embassy. Christmas decorations were used, and a company of 40 were seated at small tables in the dining room.

Guests included the Ambassador of the Netherlands and Mme. Van Roijen, Ambassador-at-Large of Spain and Senora de Lequerica, Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon, Assistant Secretary of State George C. McGhee, and Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Bretsch.

THE YOUNGER SET:

THE CHRISTMAS Assembly dinner dance was held last evening at the Sulgrave Club. Last year the dance was inaugurated by a group of friends with daughters in the last two years of high school and sons in the last two years of high school and first two years of college. The dance proved such a success that it seems slated to be an annual event.

Committee members who formed last evening's receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene C. Carusi, Mr. and Mrs. John Clifford Folger, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Granger, Mr. and Mrs. James P. Nolan, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Stenhouse, Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Wigglesworth, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Wilson and Mrs. Francis Winslow.

As the sons and daughters of committee members pass the age limit of the group, new sponsors are elected with sons and daughters the required age.

Devron's orchestra played last night from 8 p. m. to 1 a. m. Guest subscribers were seated at small tables, and Christmas greens decorated the ballroom.

DOWN THE MIDDLE AISLE:

MISS MARY Charles Fitzpatrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Knox Fitzpatrick of Atlanta, became the bride of Dr. John Grant Wilmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Wilmer of Washington, yesterday in the Cathedral of Saint Philip in Atlanta.

Dr. Wilmer is the grandson of Mrs. William Holland Wilmer and the late Dr. Wilmer, noted ophthalmologist, director of the Ophthalmology Institute of Johns Hopkins.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. Richard H. Wilmer, jr., of Sewanee, Tenn., brother of the bridegroom, and was followed by a reception at the Brookhaven Country Club.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory Duchess satin. Her only ornament was a string of matched pearls, a gift of the bridegroom. Miss Harriet Witham of Atlanta was the bride's maid of honor and Mrs. Richard H. Wilmer, jr., was matron of honor. Mr. Wilmer was best man for his son.

On their return from a wedding trip Dr. and Mrs. Wilmer will make their home in Atlanta where Dr. Wilmer will continue his work with Emory Institute.

RING ON HER FINGER:

Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Nichols of Purcellville, Va., announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Frances Anne, to Bartlett Hendrickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy F. Hendrickson of Short Hill Farm, Purcellville.

Miss Nichols is a graduate of George School, Bucks County, Pa. She attended American University, where she was a member of Phi Mu Sorority, and is a graduate of Oberlin College.

Mr. Hendrickson is a graduate of Duke University where he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

Juliet Gill, '47 Debutante Is Bride of Capt. E. L. Davis

THE MARRIAGE of Miss Juliet Parris Gill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Nicholas Gill, jr., to Capt. Edward Lawrence Davis, jr., AAF, took place yesterday at the home of the bride's parents in Georgetown. The ceremony at 4:30 p. m. was performed by the Rev. William Sharp of St. John's Church, Georgetown, before members of the two families. Captain Davis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Davis of Flourtown, Pa.

The bride's gown of ivory satin was made with tight bodice buttoned down the front and a full skirt with short train. Her veil was an heirloom of thread lace, which had been worn by several generations of brides in her family. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Mrs. William Barron Kerkam, jr., was her sister's matron of honor, and the maid of honor was Miss Katherine Hooker. Both wore dusty pink taffeta gowns with matching ostrich tips in their hair and carried round bouquets of white carnations. Oscar G. Davis of Flourtown was best man.

After a wedding trip Captain Davis and his bride will live in San Antonio, Tex., where the bridegroom is stationed.

The bride was presented to society in Washington in 1947 and is a member of the Junior League. Captain Davis is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and served in the Eighth Air Force during the war.

Sweet Briar President Says:

'Working Wives Are Here to Stay'

By Dorothea Kruger

THE WORKING wife and mother is here to stay, and it's up to the community and the Nation to help her out, as well as vice-versa. This view was advanced yesterday by the new president of Sweet Briar College, Dr. Anne Gary Pannell, who came to the capital to attend the annual luncheon of the college's alumnae group.

"Womanpower is the last great source of labor, but it must be mobilized effectively," she stated. The girls' school president believes this can best be done by having women help in the planning phase of mobilization, and by setting up community services, such as nurseries, shopping, cleaning and sewing facilities to help the working housewife.

"IN THE FUTURE, more and more women will work, and in case of war, there will be more divided homes and absent fathers. I don't believe that women are weaker as mothers because they hold jobs. But I do feel the community should help these working women out by cooperatively tackling her household chores."

In a national crises, when women will be asked to contribute their efforts, there must be "careful, long-range planning" rather than haphazard drafting of women, Dr. Pannell feels.

"Women themselves are best fitted to map out the individual jobs they do. There should be screening of women to determine vocational aptitudes, not just routine assignments to clerical or other jobs left vacant in wartime," she added.

AN IMPORTANT consideration in mobilizing women should be the rights and welfare of children. Here again women are best fitted to steer a course in the right direction, Dr. Pannell declared.

How does college fit a girl to take her place in this scheme of things? "Girls should first of all have a set of values to go by, and be trained to think for themselves. That is more important than specific vocational training, Dr. Gary feels.

"Women have to be far more adaptable then men, since they will not only be wives and mothers, but also may be called upon to serve as breadwinners. Since we can't predict the future, or tell just what women will be called upon to do, the need for stable personality and maturity is essential," she added.

The problems of the working mother are not new to Dr. Pannell, who is rearing two young sons in addition to her duties as college president.

A PART-TIME instructor at the University of Alabama when her husband died in 1946, she returned to full-time teaching, becoming assistant professor of history. She was associate professor of history in 1949 when she left to become dean of Goucher College. In May of this year she was elected Sweet Briar's fifth president, succeeding President Martha B. Lucas. At 40, she is one of the country's youngest college presidents.

Does she believe college presidents generally are getting younger? "Not really—the young ones are the exception rather than the rule. After all there's no substitute for maturity," she explains.

If They Pass the 24-50 Test:

Homemakers Start New Bookkeeping Chore, Come January 1

By Flora Gill

MRS. HOMEMAKER may have to add a bright new resolution to her New Year's list next Monday morning, January 1, 1951.

"I resolve to do my bookkeeping faithfully beginning this very day."

Her bookkeeping, part of a wave of feminine accounting expected to hit a vast number of households next Monday, will be caused by new Social Security rulings which provide coverage for domestics.

DESPITE A batch of rules and regulations which sound alarmingly complex, the basic procedure for employers is quite streamlined. To learn whether or not she is affected by the law, the housewife needs to consider only two facts. To carry out the order if it does apply, she need deal with only three steps.

The two things the housewife needs to consider are (1) whether her maid works for her 24 days (or more) in a three-month quarter, and (2) whether or not she pays the maid $50 (or more) in the same three-month period.

IF THE ANSWER to both halves of this 24-50 test is yes, these are the three steps which the homemaker must follow:

1. She must see that her employe has a Social Security number and card.

2. She must send her own name and address to the Collector of Internal Revenue in her district. This will bring, to her mailbox, sometime thereafter:

3. The simple envelope form on which she will make out her return and in which she will include her check or money order for the amount of tax due.

FOR AN EXAMPLE of this procedure in action, we give you the case history of Mrs. Alexander Stevenson of Washington who employes Pauline Holland two days a week (Tuesdays and Fridays) eight hours a day. Mrs. Stevenson pays Pauline $5.50 per day, and thus, for the 26 Tuesdays and Fridays which occur in January, February and March, will pay her a total of $143.

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

SECURITY FOR PAULINE—Mrs. Alexander Stevenson of Washington shows Pauline Holland, who works for her two days a week, the form which after January 1 will be a familiar sight in many households employing domestics

Since the $143 that Pauline receives from Mrs. Stevenson for the quarter is well over the $50 requirement, and the 26 days she works meet the 24-day regulation, there is no doubt about Pauline's eligibility under the "24-50" test.

On the other hand, Pauline works for three other employers besides Mrs. Stevenson—for each of them only one day a week. The 13 days she will work for each of these householders in the first quarter falls short of the 24-day requirement of the law. Therefore, although the $50 salary minimum for the quarter is more than fulfilled, in each case, the '24-50 test' is not met. Pauline's three other employers are thus spared any book-keeping, come January 1.

IN THE CASE of Mrs. Stevenson, who finds that the 24-50 test does apply, there are still the three further steps to follow:

Mrs. Stevenson is fortunate with regard to the first of these, since Pauline already has a Social Security card. Other householders may find that a major chore in connection with the new law will be reminding workers who are unaware of their benefits under the measure that getting the card is to their advantage, and getting down to procure it a necessity.

The second step, registration with the Collector of Internal Revnue, has been simplified.

A SMALL BOOKLET entitled "Do You Have a Maid?" is now being distributed in many postoffices, as well as at local offices of collectors of Internal Revenue and at the Social Security Administration. Not only does this booklet answer essential questions on the subject, but it contains a stamped-addressed postcard which may simply be filled in and mailed by the employer, to comply with the second requirement of the law.

When Mrs. Stevenson mails this postcard, or a slip of her own devising, 'The Form' will automatically appear in her mail box, probably late in the quarter. This all-important document—soon to become a familiar object in all qualifying households—is part tax-form, part envelope.

The tax is figured and recorded on its inner surface, and the tax itself can then be inclosed if paid by check or money order. The housewife who wishes to pay cash must take it direct to the Collector of Internal Revenue for her district—hardly practical for any resident of the D. C. area, since D. C. and Maryland folk must pay to Baltimore, and Virginians, to Richmond.

THE TAX consists of 3 percent of the domestic's wages, 1½ percent to be deducted from her weekly salary and the other 1½ percent to be matched by her employer. Since Mrs. Stevenson will be paying Pauline $143 for the first three-month quarter, the tax due for that quarter comes to $4.29—exactly 3 percent of $143.

The law assumes that half of this 3 percent will be paid by the employer, and half by the worker, so Mrs. Stevenson is obliged to pay only 1½ percent of the $143 herself. Pauline will then contribute the other 1½ percent. This would come to $2.14½ each for Mrs. Stevenson and Pauline.

Since the amount is nominal, some employers may choose to absorb the full 3 percent themselves. This would simplify their book-keeping, since the process of deducting 1½ percent from an employe's wages each week conceivably could be a tedious process.

WHETHER SHE chooses to absorb the tax or deduct from Pauline's wage, Mrs. Stevenson will record the same figures on her form and enclose the same amount of tax in the self-contained envelope. She will also have to record Pauline's Social Security account number every time she returns the tax form.

Happy bookkeeping!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman, 35, Likens Herself to Character in Novel, Who Has Everybody's Good Word and Nobody's Notice; Unhappy Childhood Made Her a Recluse; How Rebound?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 35, and all my life I have been like the character of whom Jane Austen says, "He has everybody's good word and nobody's notice." I was somewhat plain, and tomboyish long past the age for tomboy manifestations. I was known as "a good girl" and had the practically unqualified approval of all mothers, grandmothers and aunts, whose praise my mother often quoted in a satisfied tone: "We never worry when we know that Emily is going to be at the party."

As you may have guessed, I wasn't asked to many parties. My contemporaries found me rather peculiar. When I was small and did get an occasional invitation to a neighborhood birthday party, mother would make me take my little brother along, insisting they couldn't have wanted just me. On arrival I would just sit, too shy and too fearful to join in the games or even talk. Such was the pattern of my social growth, except that I was increasingly ignored until now I have no social life, aside from an invitation perhaps once a year, or once in two years. Then the event is both torture and delight. I am no longer terrified but I have become rather stiff and cold.

I didn't learn to dance in early years, as I had no opportunity, and was too awkward, self conscious and afraid of people, especially boys. I felt uneasily that it was sinful to enjoy oneself, and that dancing led to nameless evils. Mother never forbade dancing, but would look grim, draw herself up and chill my blood by saying, "You'll never meet God on the dance floor." Yet she often tells how she was the best dancer in the county, belle of the ball, etc.—all very confusing. When I reached the age for mixed parties and wasn't invited, she would add to my misery by taxing me about it, and holding me at fault for having no friends. Yet if I showed liking for someone, she would take pains to point out that the person didn't really like me, or wouldn't if they really knew me.

My brother Edgar was different—handsome and popular—and she was very proud of him until he disappointed her. But even with him the accent was negative. One New Year's Eve, when he was wearing evening clothes (borrowed) for the first time, he came to the living room for inspection, and mother drew herself up and said, "I hope my boy is as clean inside as he is out." His face took on the sulky look that was becoming habitual. I've never been to a holiday party nor ever given one. When I first came here I was twice invited to holiday parties, but had to refuse as I was going back home. This year I am not going back, though mother is a widow now and quite alone.

This year I have an apartment and want to be festive—free of family tensions, accusations of being un-Christian, an unbeliever, therefore worse than a murderer, etc.—but I don't know how to go about anything which involves congeniality and companionship. It is true, as mother says, that I am absolutely cold, and believe in nothing and no one; and care more for books than company. After lengthy psychoanalysis, I feel rather more uncomfortable than otherwise. Am I just a "wrong-un," or born to be alone? I wish I were generous enough to love mother; but I'm not; and I wonder if it is contemptible for me to feel as I do? P. L.

DEAR P. L.: Your long letter, here much condensed, is a masterly exposition of maternal destructiveness at work—I am tempted to say, doing its worst—in the realm of personality. Short of strangling you at birth—as may have been her inhibited urge—your mother could hardly have done more violence to your potentials than she has inflicted over the years, via her hateful rejecting tactics.

Considering the nightmare quality of your childhood, it is a personal achievement of a major order, to be able, at 35, to look back on those years with vigorous humorous discernment and honesty of mind—as you are doing here. It is no crime that you cannot—or at any rate do not yet—love your mother. And it is better to know what you feel than to fool yourself. To confront the truth about oneself is the first long step towards effective self-government.

The substance of your attitude towards your mother is a neurotic replica of her predominant attitude towards you in the early relationship. She has not loved you. At the start she resented your very existence, it seems; probably because you constituted a clamorous outside demand on her attentions, at a time when she felt inexplicably threatened by neurotic anxieties and completely exhausted in fighting them. At best in her relationship to you, she was "doing her duty" according to her lights; but her lights were very dim, as proved by her shattering assaults on your sensibilities in formative years, when she supposed she was forcing your growth in the right direction.

As for your being absolutely cold, believing in nothing and nobody, and preferring books to people—these attitudes are a camouflage of hopelessness with regard to an inhibited hunger for love. They are a direct result of not being warmly loved and respected by trustworthy associates, either now or in the past. And if psychoanalysis has made you uncomfortable, perhaps it is because your numbness is giving way to a sense of life. Maybe you are on the verge of feeling human, which is an uncomfortable feeling if borne alone. And that is why the whole theme of Christianity is "Love one another,"—to make life's mysterious loneliness as tolerable as possible for all concerned.

To get the knack of hospitality, be practical. Learn to cook and smartly serve a tasty meal, by following instructions given in the leading women's magazines. Get a television set or gramophone plus some good music records, also a good brand of light wine, then be bold and persistent in corralling, one by one or two by two, nice people you know, for a little supper with you occasionally. Don't try to shine as a hostess this holiday season; just get busy shopping and rehearsing for the role.

Bureau of Missing Investigations

The investigative powers of Congress represent a major democratic bulwark. This legislative function is vital not only because it frequently unearths evidence leading to punitive action in courts. Just as important is the essential vigilance it provides by enlightening citizens about the problems and perils which must be surmounted if we are to keep liberty secure . . . Many Congressional probers carry out their duties effectively. But too often the watchdogs of democracy seem to have more bark than bite.

When legislative detectives perform like Rip Van Winkle it is the duty of newspapermen to act . . . As, for instance, take the Joint Congressional ECA Committee. It recently probed expenses of junketing legislators. The committee investigators turned in an expert job. Too expert . . . Result: The Committee suppressed the reports of its own probers.

Shortly after Germany called it quits the United States Army obtained possession of secret Nazi files detailing activities of alleged Americans who aided the Nazi cause. Some of these so-called Americans are in high places . . . The customary rigamarole followed: Promises that public disclosure of the Nazi files would soon be made. Then it was forgotten by Washington . . . But not by this elephant.

Occasionally you wonder whether the energy and tax-coin spent for Congressional investigations are worthwhile. For example: Several months ago the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee returned from a mission of inquiry in Europe with a unanimous recommendation: Under no circumstances must West Germany's rearmament be allowed. Hmf!

The abuse of Congressional franking privileges has followed a monotonous pattern: Prior to World War II misuse of postage-free benefits resulted in numerous demands for investigations. The routine was encored during and after the war . . . Just a few months ago trouble-merchant Edward A. Rumely confessed his discredited outfit had circulated under Congressional franks (the past 4 years) over 8 million letters. Once again there were demands for a probe of franking abuses. And what did we get? Nothing.

A surfire applause-getter for campaigning politicos is yammering devotion to economy. They vow to slash this and whittle that in an effort to aid the ever-lovin' taxpayer . . . Well, the Hoover Commission investigated Government operations and estimated that five billion dollars could be saved by more efficient Gov't organization without eliminating any present functions. Some of the Hoover Commission's economy suggestions were adopted; most were ignored.

Remember the ruckus kicked up by the investigation of 5 percenters? What a headline inferno! . . . The probers urged reforms in the handling of Government transactions and more stringent laws to stop the 5-percenter Americans. That was about two years ago.

The 5-percenters are back in business today . . . Last month a Senate Committee issued a pulse-whipping report about the skulduggery involved in the sale of surplus war material and blasted the war profiters who are still playing Uncle Sam for a sucker.

On November 25, 1945, the AP reported: "State Department officials said today that investigation of a list of 9000 Germans living in Spain showed that at least 1000 were former Nazi agents. The list is still being checked."

No action was ever taken against the Nazi agents. Is the State Dep't still checking its list? Apparently not.

The KKK is still practicing cowardice and making a professon of infamy. Sure there have been vows galore that the KKK would be investigated. Yet the Kluxers have never been publicly questioned by a Congressional committee . . . Some years ago the Un-American Activities Committee amassed 500 pages of closed-door testimony of KKK activities. And it was promptly buried . . . Why the Klan inquiry was held behind closed doors and why the facts were embalmed are two of those big question marks.

Any Washington newsman in the market for a Pulitzer Prize? He can snare it with a little reportorial effort: Dig up the inside story explaining why rabble-rouser Gerald L. K. Smith is immune to Congressional investigation. Never has one man been such a nuisance. And never have legislative probers done less to stop him . . . Who are the influential friends shielding this soandso? And why?

Back in 1946 Moscow offically requested permission to send Soviet engineers to the United States. The FBI opposed granting permission but was overruled by the dear old State Dep't . . . The Communist engineers came here and received detailed drawings of every major water system in the United States . . . Why should Stalin bother paying spies when the Dep't of State gives them invitations? . . . Water systems, of course, are a prime target in war. If the water systems of our major cities were poisoned or destroyed, the Nation would be paralyzed . . . Who are the State Dep't fairies who okayed this Moscow request? Senator McCarthy could stay on the front pages with that one.

Here's one to make honest taxpayers—meaning you—sizzle: The House Ways and Means Committee investigated tax evasions last year. The committee estimated that tax-dodgers are costing the Government five billion dollars by ducking through loopholes in laws. But were the loopholes patched? . . . Ha!

Then there's the June 2nd, 1950, UP report that a House investigating committee would ask certain tycoons, including the duPonts, to explain their connections with Merwin K. Hart, who has made a cozy living off sucker lists.

There are 8 pro-Communist labor unions repesenting 400,000 workers who are currently engaged in strategic industries . . . Some of the union members are now involved in top secret projects . . . Patriotic labor chiefs have been pleading with the Government to investigate the dirty Red-tainted unions. Thus far—no soap.

Anna Rosenberg, new Ass't Sec'y of Defense, was appointed to her job after being tarred and feathered by a team of vicious bigots. The dirty play was G. L. K. Smith to Ben Friedman to Ralph De Sola with Congressman John Rankin rating an assist. The boys had a national commentator as a cheer leader on the sidelines. And a United States Senator was fouled into the action by a West Coast propagandist . . . When the truth came out and the lynching collapsed, Mrs. Rosenberg's accusers started recanting and doubletalking all over the field. The Senate Armed Service Committee then mentioned perjury indictments . . . That I got to see!

What can you do about it? Clip and mail this indictment to your Congressman. Ask him what he is going to do about it and then send his double-talk replies to me. I need a column of new jokes.

Court Upholds Conviction Of Attorney

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the conviction of Attorney Albert F. Graham, sentenced to serve from six to 18 months for larceny of $2000 from a client.

Francisco Gal, 47, a Hungarian immigrant, who was the complaining witness, testified that when he approached Graham to represent him in a disorderly conduct case, Graham said he would "have to talk to the policeman. You have to pay money for that because the money is talk."

Gal said that he was apprehensive that the arrest would impede his obtaining American citizenship. He said he gave Graham the money.

Graham contended that the $2000 was for legal services only.

The Appeals Court decision, written by Judge George T. Washington, states that "it was possible for the jury to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant fraudulently induced Gal to give him $2000 to be used for a special purpose, i. e., to bribe the police, that the defendant did not intend so to use the money, and converted it to his own use."

Graham has been out on bail pending disposition of his case by the Court of Appeals. He has been practicing law virtually every day in Municipal Court.

Father of Boy, Dead in War, Has 6 Ready to Fight

The father of a Canadian boy who lost his life while fighting in Korea has offered the lives of the six other members of his family if necessary to preserve what his oldest son died for.

James Shea, St. Catharines, Ontario, made this offer in a letter to the United States Army Adjutant General, Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell.

Shea wrote that his son James fought with the United States Ninth Infantry Regiment of the Second Division in Korea and was no less a patriot than George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Patrick Henry because he "along with many other poor lads was fighting the cause of liberty."

"And now your letter of December 11 comes to me, that somewhere in that distant land he has found his final resting place. Well, let it be, and if need be, there are six other lives from the father of him, and the mother of him, to the youngest of his brothers, who will willingly give what he and countless others will give in the preservation of human rights and dignity."

Six-Week-Old Girl Dies in Her Bassinet

According to police, the baby was found by her mother about 7:30 a. m. There was no immediate indication of the cause of death, police said. An autopsy will be performed by Dr. Emanuel Newman, county medical examiner.

The Case of the Two Soapy Air Theaters

—By John Crosby—

LUX RADIO THEATER is the granddaddy of radio's dramatic programs, the first regularly scheduled drama show, the oldest and one of the most popular of all radio programs. It has a sure-fire formula. Lux dramatizes a movie, usually at the height of its exploitation by the movie people, and casts it with the original stars or stars of equal candlepower.

Crosby

The movie people have never been entirely happy at the way Lux takes a free ride on movie publicity which has cost them hundreds of thousands of dollars to create. They are even less happy about the fact that Lux can acquire for $1000 the radio rights to a story they may have paid a quarter of a million clams for. And they are downright unhappy that their stars, whose grooming and commercial buildup cost them tons of money, can be so casually borrowed to sell soap. Just the same, Lux gets away with it, and this shrewdly borrowed fame has kept the program consistently on the top of the rating list for years.

ALL OF WHICH is just a preliminary to some consideration of Lux video theater, a different kettle of fish entirely. This is a half-hour drama (CBS-WTOP-TV 8 p. m. Mondays) and, let's face it, it's a bad show. The reasons for its badness are so obvious that I fail to understand why they didn't occur to Lux. For one thing, the brightest Hollywood stars on which the success of the radio program largely depends are still prevented by contract from appearing on television. Another thing, it's darned near impossible to get the television rights to any good movie, whereas it was comparatively easy to buy radio rights. Television is too close to a motion picture to suit people who, after all, have to sell tickets.

Consequently, Lux has resorted to digging up old plays, short stories and books. There's nothing the matter with this except that the Lux people are not used to doing it and don't appear to know how to do it well. A half hour isn't very long to tell a story, and the producers don't select the sort of stories that can be told in that length. The first production, for heaven's sakes, was "Saturday's Children," an old full-length play by Maxwell Anderson.

I can't imagine how anyone thought he could compress that into half an hour. The fragment I saw dwelt on women's rights, a battle which was won a good many years ago and which has largely lost its significance. Miss Joan Caulfield, of the films, who makes rather a specialty of innocence, devoted herself to staring off into space with a hurt look on her pretty phiz. She kept having showdowns with her new husband, whose name eludes me. One showdown after another which invariably ended with: "Good by!" (Slam of door.)

THE WHOLE PIECE as written, directed and acted on a note of sustained hysteria as if Miss Caufield wanted to get it over with and get the hell out of the way before she got run over by Hopalong Cassidy. Even the Jukes family, which has been distinctly cool to Maxwell Anderson since he likened them to critics, couldn't have wished such a terrible thing to happen to one of his plays.

It is the custom on all Lux theaters to visit the star in her dressing room after the show. Here, William Keighley, the producer, and the star shower one another and the rest of the cast with endearments and praise. Then they fall to discussing the virtues of Lux soap and right here you see some of the greatest acting of all time. "Wherever I am, I'll be a Lux girl. It's a wonderful soap!" Murmured Miss Joan Caulfield. Brought tears to my eyes.

WHY'NCHA SAY SO

Harold Hayes of 1900 Van Buren st., Hyattsville, Md., works at REA, and passes along an amusing pre-Christmas episode.

The gang in the office were all set to start their Christmas party, except that one girl was unaccountably late. After a half hour's delay the chief was told that the missing G-gal was on the phone.

"What's happened?" he asked. "Where are you?"

"I'm in the nut house," she replied.

"Where?" he exclaimed in disbelief.

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Conrad Reid of 6703 Connecticut ave., Chevy Chase, Md., was on a rush-hour bus at Chevy Chase Circle the other evening, quietly sympathizing with the driver, who couldn't get anybody to move toward the rear.

To a woman who wanted to board the bus at the circle, the driver sadly announced: "Sorry, lady, they won't move back so I can't take any more passengers."

"Let me on there young man," she snapped. "I'll move 'em."

"And by golly, she did," reports District Liner Reid. "Without any blocking to speak of, she picked up a good 10 yards before the secondary stopped her—and you should have seen what an effective straight-arm she had."

POOR PEOPLE DON'T HAVE THESE TROUBLES

The operator of a string of local parking lots gave me something to think about yesterday.

"You write learned articles about the parking situation here," he said, "but I wonder if you ever stopped to think about the matter from our viewpoint."

"What's that?" I prompted.

"Well," he said, "let's suppose you make your living in this business. You're in constant touch with District officials who encourage private investors to put up the cash for additional parking facilities. And, as a businessman, you listen to them with interest.

"But at the same time, you're forever being frightened by hints that the parking business may be declared a public utility, with the District regulating the rates to be charged. What's more, you hear about all sorts of schemes to put the Federal or District Government into the parking business, through the use of Government money, or land, or both.

"Then let's suppose that one day they come to you and say: 'There's a great need for a new $250,000 garage in a certain area. Why don't you build one there?'

"What would your answer be? Would you risk a quarter of a million, knowing that the minute your garage is built the Government might decide to regulate your fees—or even set up a lot next door, in competition with you? Would you rush into the project, burning with civic zeal to provide more parking facilities; or would you stop to wonder whether it looked like a safe investment?"

Even a fellow who doesn't happen to have $250,000 in cash right at the moment can see that the parking operators have a legitimate cause for concern. But it may be that the outlook is not as dark as my friend sees it.

District officials have repeatedly turned down suggestions to declare the parking business a public utility, and they have been equally cool to the proposal that the Government should get into the parking business. So it would seem logical to assume that these policies will be continued in the foreseeable future.

And even if some future change in policy should result in public regulation of parking fees, operators would have to be guaranteed some kind of "fair" return on investment. While this might make the business less attractive to them, it would nevertheless protect them against ruinous losses.

So I guess my answer to the operator's question would have to be this:

If I had $250,000 I think I'd invest it in nothing more speculative than U. S. Government bonds. But our business community, with its greater familiarity with large sums of money, should show more courage in investing those funds, and build garages to whatever extent it appears such establishments will be profitable.

THESE MODERN TIMES

You probably read about the letter 10-year-old Tommy Pearce sent to the Navy the other day, giving our ordnance experts a few tips on how to design an atomic torpedo.

Tommy's father, Leslie Pearce of 2409 S. Hayes st., Arlington, Va., works in the office of the Housing Expediter. His colleagues gave him a merry ribbing the morning the story appeared.

The elder Pearce took the kidding soberly, and replied:

"I'm surprised that The Washington Post printed the letter, and the accompanying drawings. Suppose the Russians get hold of it?"

DID YOU HEAR HIM?

Folks are still talking about the emphasis used by Lawyer Melvin D. Hildreth at the lighting of the National Community Christmas Tree, when he introduced:

"The President of the UNITED States."

OVERHEARD

"The United Nations could be one big happy family if it weren't for mother-in-law Russia."

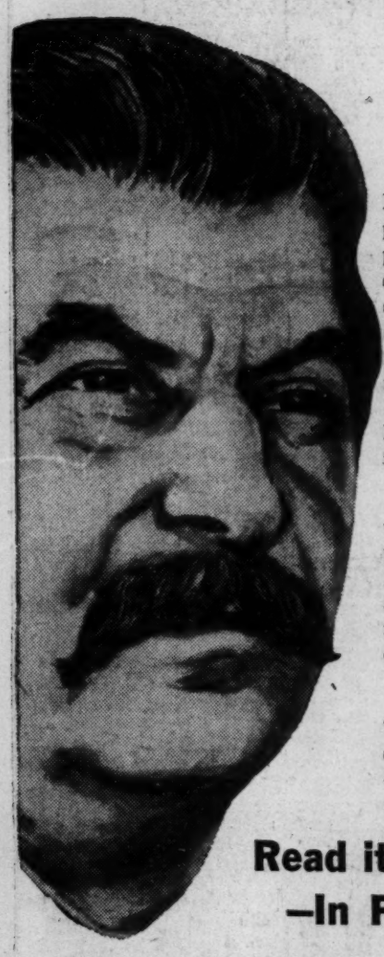
LET'S KEEP THE RUSSIANS GUESSING!



Admiral William H. P. Blandy USN (Ret.) proposes a hard-hitting program for 1951, designed to keep the Russians "off-balance". In an exclusive article in Sunday's Parade, Admiral Blandy outlines a 10 point program for beating the Communists at their own game.

We have powerful weapons for the counter-attack—Truth . . . Religion . . . Freedom and Laughter. We must not fail to use them, declares the admiral.

You'll agree that "Let's Keep the Russians Guessing!" is one of the most important articles of the year.

Hoover's Speech Splits GOP

By Drew Pearson

Hottest debate that has torn Republican ranks in years was touched off by the hands-off-Europe speech of Herbert Hoover.

Pearson

So far, two interesting trends have developed:

1. Taft and Dewey, two presidential contenders, are sure to head the two isolationist and nonisolationist wings of the party. Governor Dewey has been on the telephone to Washington privately several times a week trying to keep the bipartisan policy on an even keel: This is one reason why Senator Ives of New York, whom Dewey put in the United States Senate, has eased up on his Administration attacks.

2. Unless elder statesman Vandenberg gets back to work, which is highly doubtful, the Republican Party is likely to split into two vigorously differing, perhaps bitter groups.

A curtain-raiser on how GOP Senators feel about foreign policy was the debate on Secretary of State Acheson which took place behind the closed doors of the Republican Senate caucus. This was much more vehement than leaked to the press, the keynote being set by Senator Taft.

Angry Taft

"I do not want any more of this consulting with the Administration," he told colleagues. "I see no reason to consult as long as Harry Truman is in the White House. Our duty as Republicans is to criticize, and I think that ought to be made clear in this resolution."

Taft's angry outburst came after Senator Owen Brewster had proposed that the resolution condemning Acheson be postponed at least until after the Brussels conference.

"This is exactly the right time to pass the resolution, before Acheson goes to the confernce," Taft countered, his eyes bristling. "We don't want any more of him. All this soft talk against weakening Acheson is nonsense. We ought to weaken him. I don't want any agreement he will negotiate. That's been our trouble—Acheson and his agreements."

Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa backed up Taft. "Our soldiers are dying because of Acheson," he observed.

However, Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon differed. "We have no right to pull the rug out from under Acheson just before he goes to Brussels," Morse argued. "These are private quarrels and we ought not to advertise them to the world."

Chan Gurney of South Dakota, former chairman of the Armed Services Committee, also tried to calm down the meeting.

"This is a time for us to act like Americans, not like partisan Republicans," he said. Taft glared at Gurney as if the South Dakotan meant this as a personal crack.

Oil on Water

Lean Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts moved to pour oil on the troubled waters by proposing a substitute resolution which called for reorganization of the State Department from top to bottom without naming Acheson.

In the argument that followed, 15 Senators—the isolationist bloc—agreed with Taft. One of them, Arthur Watkins of Utah, shook his head: "This war just shows how the chickens have come to roost for the internationalists."

When it came time to decide on the straight oust-Acheson resolution, George Malone of Nevada, usually an isolationist, commented: "I think this is a mistake, but if we can get any action from the Administration I'll vote for it."

Note—Among the antiisolationist Republicans—in addition to Saltonstall, Morse and Gurney—are: Tobey of New Hampshire, Smith of New Jersey, Smith of Maine, Aiken of Vermont, Cordon of Oregon, Lodge of Massachusetts, Hendrickson of New Jersey, with usually Thye of Minnesota and hitherto Ives of New York.

Capital Capsules

Anti-Semitic Smear—Secretary of Defense George Marshall was so grateful for the hard, digging work of the FBI in running down the unfair smearing of Assistant Defense Secretary Anna Rosenberg that he sent Truman a long letter praising the G-men. FBI agents worked around the clock to dig up the facts revealing that Gerald L. K Smith, Senator Joe McCarthy, radio commentator Fulton Lewis and the perjured testimony were back of the smear . . . Among the most indignant members of the Senate Armed Services Committee regarding this unfair conspiracy were Republican George Cain of Washington with conservative Southern Democrats Dick Russell of Georgia and Harry Byrd of Virginia.

Herbert Hoover Forgot—Diplomats point out that one thing Herbert Hoover forgot when he urged a hands-off policy for western Europe was the story of iron and steel. Russia's real Achilles' heel is steel. She and her satellites produce less than 28 million tons a year, while we produce about 100 million. But if Russia should take over the great steel resources of the Ruhr and Rhineland, she would have, next to ours, the greatest steel resources in the world . . . Hoover, an engineer, apparently forgot this.

European Pessimism—Prior to the Brussels conference and the appointment of Eisenhower, United States diplomats all over Europe had cabled that a wave of defeatism was sweeping Atlantic Pact nations. Morale was lower than at any time since Pearl Harbor, with the Communists planning to take advantage of it by staging paralyzing strikes and riots. The Brussels conference has now changed the picture somewhat, though the Korean debacle has left unremovable scars.
